Metropolitan Water District of Southern California Elaine M. Howle, 2008-11 The Southern Calif District's broad interpretation of the purposes for which it can spend public funds has led to policies governing expenses that generally are not well defined and do not always ensure that expenses have a direct link to the district's authorized purposes For example the district financially sponsors numerous organization's activities without justifying the direct link to the purposes for which the district was created Additionally more than 4 years after the enactment of legislation that directed it to create an ethics office the district still is trying to establish an effective one Further the district has not always established adequate policies and procedures for its purchasing and consulting contracts Charts and tables

Promise Unfulfilled Philip L. Martin, 2018-08-06 In 1975 after vigorous campaigning by the United Farm Workers union the state of California passed the Agricultural Labor Relations Act ALRA a pioneering self help strategy granting farm workers the right to organize into unions A quarter century later only a tiny percentage of farm workers in the state belong to unions and wages remain less than half of those of nonfarm employees Why did the ALRA fail One of the nation's foremost authorities on farm workers here explores the reasons behind its unfulfilled promise Philip L Martin examines the key features of the farm labor market in California including the shifting ethnicity of the worker pool and the evolution of the major unions beginning with the Wobblies Finally he reviews the impact of immigration on agriculture in the state Today many states look to the California experience to assess whether the ALRA can serve as a model for their own farm labor relations laws In Martin's view California's efforts to grant rights to farm workers so that they can help themselves have failed because of continued unauthorized migration and the changing structure of farm employment Martin argues that alternative policies would make farming profitable raise farm worker wages and still keep groceries affordable Annual Report San Francisco (Calif.). Transborder Lives Lynn Stephen,2007-06-13 Lynn Stephen's innovative ethnography follows indigenous Mexicans from two towns in the state of Oaxaca the Mixtec community of San Agustín Atenango and the Zapotec community of Teotitlán del Valle who periodically leave their homes in Mexico for extended periods of work in California and Oregon Demonstrating that the line separating Mexico and the United States is only one among the many borders that these migrants repeatedly cross including national regional cultural ethnic and class borders and divisions Stephen advocates an ethnographic framework focused on transborder rather than transnational lives Yet she does not disregard the state She assesses the impact migration has had on local systems of government in both Mexico and the United States as well as the abilities of states to police and affect transborder communities Stephen weaves the personal histories and narratives of indigenous transborder migrants together with explorations of the larger structures that affect their lives Taking into account U S immigration policies and the demands of both commercial agriculture and the service sectors she chronicles how migrants experience and remember low wage work in agriculture landscaping and childcare and how gender relations in Oaxaca and the United States are reconfigured by migration She looks at the ways that racial and ethnic hierarchies inherited from the colonial era hierarchies that debase Mexico's indigenous groups are reproduced within heterogeneous Mexican populations in the United States Stephen provides case studies of four grass roots organizations in which Mixtec migrants are involved and she considers specific uses of digital technology by transborder communities Ultimately Stephen demonstrates that transborder migrants are reshaping notions of territory and politics by developing creative models of governance education and economic development as well as ways of maintaining their cultures and languages across geographic distances
