The Journal to Stella Jonathan Swift, 2016-09-01 The history of the publication of the Journal to Stella is somewhat curious On Swift's death twenty five of the letters forming the closing portion of the series fell into the hands of Dr Lyon a clergyman who had been in charge of Swift for some years The letters passed to a man named Wilkes who sold them for publication They accordingly appeared in 1766 in the tenth volume of Dr Hawkesworth's quarto edition of Swift's works but the editor made many changes in the text including a suppression of most of the little language The publishers however fortunately for us were public spirited enough to give the manuscripts with one exception to the British Museum where after many years they were examined by John Forster who printed in his unfinished Life of Swift numerous passages from the originals showing the manner in which the text had been tampered with by Hawkesworth Swift himself too in his later years obliterated many words and sentences in the letters and Forster was able to restore not a few of these omissions His zeal however sometimes led him to make guesses at words which are quite undecipherable Besides Forster's work I have had the benefit of the careful collation made by Mr Ryland for his edition of 1897 Where these authorities differ I have usually found myself in agreement with Mr Ryland but I have felt justified in accepting some of Forster's readings which previously were rejected by him as uncertain and the examination of the manuscripts has enabled me to make some additions and corrections of my own Swift's writing is extremely small and abounds in abbreviations The difficulty of arriving at the true reading is therefore considerable apart from the erasures

A Journal to Stella Jonathan Swift, 2021-01-19 Published posthumously in 1766 A Journal to Stella by Jonathan Swift is a complete collection consisting of sixty five letters he wrote to Esther Johnson whom he bestowed the name of Stella It is known that Stella is the name Swift gave to Esther Johnson They met when she was only eight years old and knew each other for the entirety of the rest of their lives Swift was first a mentor to young Esther He taught her to read and write then introduced her to the arts Jonathan's relationship to Esther is intriguing While they shared a friendship for many years Jonathan left her in Ireland when he moved to London for some time In that time he drew interest from several other women but nothing came of those relationships However when a man showed interest in Esther and wished to propose the letters disclose how Jonathan prevented this from happening Such interference provides greater evidence for the affection he felt for Stella There are no accounts from Stella herself but Swift depicts her character wonderfully as a loyal kind and clever woman The sixty five letters to Stella that compose A Journal to Stella explores Swift and Johnson s relationship and history A Journal to Stella is an interesting study on the relationship between the highly esteemed classical author Jonathan Swift and a woman who was very dear to him Written with affection and detailed prose the letters that are featured in A Journal to Stella also reveal insights on the culture of 18th century London and features many of the prominent men that Swift met As he wrote of his daily routine and life readers are allowed a privileged glimpse of how this famous author lived day to day including the intimate details of his relationships Containing the wit and humor Swift is famous for A Journal to Stella reveals the author for who he really was allowing even modern readers to know this incredible 18th century man This edition of Jonathan Swift s A Journal to Stella features an eye catching cover design and is printed in a readable font making it both accessible and modern enabled me to make some additions and corrections of my own Swift's writing is extremely small and abounds in abbreviations. The difficulty of arriving at the true reading is therefore considerable apart from the erasures. The remainder of the Journal consisting of the first forty letters was published in 1768 by Deane Swift, Dr Swift's second cousin. These letters had been given to Mrs Whiteway in 1788 and by her to her son-in-law Deane Swift. The originals have been lost with the exception of the first which by some accident is in the British Museum but it is evident that Deane Swift took even greater liberties with the text than Hawkesworth. He substituted for Ppt the word Stella a name which Swift seems not to have used until some years later he adopted the name Presto for Swift and in other ways tried to give a greater literary finish to the letters. The whole of the correspondence was first brought together under the title of the Journal to Stella in Sheridan's edition of 1784. Previous editions of the Journal have been but slightly annotated. Swift's letters abound with allusions to people of all classes with whom he came in contact in London and to others known to Esther Johnson in Ireland and a large proportion of these persons have been passed over in discreet silence by Sir Walter Scott and others. The task of the annotator has of course been made easier of late years by the publication of contemporary journals and letters and of useful works of reference dealing with Parliament, the Army, the Church, the Civil Service and the like besides the invaluable Dictionary of National Biography. I have also been assisted by a collection of MS notes kindly placed at my disposal by Mr Thomas Seccombe. I have aimed at brevity and relevance but it is hoped that the reader will find all the information that is necessary. Here and there a name has baffled research but I have been able to give definite particulars of a very large number of people, noblemen and ladies in society in London or Dublin, Members of Parliament, doctors, clergymen, Government officials and others who have hitherto been but names to the reader of the Journal. I have corrected a good many errors in the older notes but in dealing with so large a number of persons some of whom it is difficult to identify I cannot hope that I myself have escaped pitfalls.
