Living out of Bounds Steven J. Overman,2008-11-30 Despite some enormous differences in salary among professional athletes most aspects of their daily lives remain surprisingly constant across sports and income levels In Living out of Bounds author Steven J Overman mines a wide array of sports biographies autobiographies memoirs and diaries to construct a representative picture of the athlete's life. In the course of the work a portrait emerges that transcends the individual lives lived. The shared experiences of devoted training of travel and hotels and of tension within and beyond the clubhouse or gym force us to appreciate the often oppressive reality of the sporting life at the same time that the individual lives lived also provide us with a glimpse of the rewards that make sports so compelling to audiences and athletes across America.

Modernist Soundscapes Angela Frattarola, 2018-11-12 At the turn of the twentieth century new technologies such as the phonograph telephone and radio changed how sound was transmitted and perceived. In Modernist Soundscapes Angela Frattarola analyzes the influence of the age of noise on writers of the time showing how modernist novelists used sound to bridge the distance between characters and to connect with the reader on a more intimate level. Frattarola tunes in to representations of voices noise and music in works by Dorothy Richardson Virginia Woolf James Joyce Jean Rhys and Samuel Beckett. She argues that the common use of headphones which piped sounds from afar into a listener's headspace inspired modernists to record the interior monologues of their characters in a stream of consciousness style. Woolf's onomatopoeia stemmed from a desire to render the sounds of the world without mediation similar to how some contemporaries hoped that recording technology would eliminate the need for musicians. Frattarola also explains how Beckett's linguistic repetition mirrors the mechanical reproduction of the tape recorder. These writers challenged ocularcentrism the traditional emphasis on vision in art and philosophy and instead characterized the eye as distancing and analytical and the act of listening as immediate and unifying. Contending that the experimentation typically associated with modernist writing is partly due to this new attentiveness to sound this book introduces a fresh perspective on texts that set the course of contemporary literature
