Consuming Stories Rebecca Peabody, 2021-02-23 In Consuming Stories Rebecca Peabody uses the work of contemporary American artist Kara Walker to investigate a range of popular storytelling traditions with roots in the nineteenth century and ramifications in the present Focusing on a few key pieces that range from a wall size installation to a reworked photocopy in an artist's book and from a theater curtain to a monumental sculpture Peabody explores a significant yet neglected aspect of Walker's production her commitment to examining narrative depictions of race gender power and desire Consuming Stories considers Walker's sustained visual engagement with literary genres such as the romance novel the neo slave narrative and the fairy tale and with internationally known stories including Roots Beloved and Uncle Tom's Cabin Walker's interruption of these familiar works along with her generative use of the familiar in unexpected and destabilizing ways reveals the extent to which genre based narrative conventions depend on specific representations of race especially when aligned with power and desire Breaking these implicit rules makes them visible and in turn highlights viewers reliance on them for narrative legibility As this study reveals Walker's engagement with narrative continues beyond her early silhouette work as she moves into media such as film video and sculpture Peabody also shows how Walker uses her tools and strategies to unsettle cultural histories abroad when she works outside the United States These stories Peabody reminds us not only change the way people remember history but also shape the entertainment industry Ultimately Consuming Stories shifts the critical conversation away from the visual legacy of historical racism toward the present day role of the entertainment industry and its consumers in processes of racialization

The Transnational in Literary Studies Kai Wiegandt, 2020-07-06 This volume clarifies the meanings and applications of the concept of the transnational and identifies areas in which the concept can be particularly useful The division of the volume into three parts reflects areas which seem particularly amenable to analysis through a transnational lens The chapters in Part 1 present case studies in which the concept replaces or complements traditionally dominant concepts in literary studies These chapters demonstrate for example why some dramatic texts and performances can better be described as transnational than as postcolonial and how the transnational underlies and complements concepts such as world literature Part 2 assesses the advantages and limitations of writing literary history with a transnational focus These chapters illustrate how such a perspective loosens the epistemic stranglehold of national historiographies but they also argue that the transnational and national agendas of literary historiography are frequently entangled The chapters in Part 3 identify transnational genres such as the transnational historical novel transnational migrant fiction and translinguistic theatre and analyse the specific poetics and politics of these genres
