Campion, 2005-06-29 In recent years the notion of parenting and parenthood have increasingly come under examination from the media and professionals and in particular government and politicians More and more parents are being held to account by society for their failure to deliver the sort of citizens it wants But what are parents supposed to be doing Are there some people that are inherently unfit to be parents and does there exist a body of knowledge that defines fit parenting Who s fit to be a parent covers this highly topical and important subject in a stimulating and accessible way that cuts across numerous professional disciplines and opens up the boundaries between professional and personal expertise on parenting It is essential reading for any professional or student of social work and social policy those working in the voluntary services concerned with the family social policy makers and for anyone interested in understanding what it means to be a parent today

The Claims of Parenting Stefan Ramaekers, Judith Suissa, 2011-09-15 Many sociological historical and cultural stories can be and have already been told about why it is that parents in post industrial western societies face an often overwhelming array of advice on how to bring up their children At the same time there have been several philosophical treatments of the legal moral and political issues surrounding issues of procreation the rights of children and the duties of parents as well as some philosophical accounts of the shifts in our underlying conceptualization of childhood and adult child relationships While this book partly builds on the insights of this literature it is significantly different in that it offers a philosophically informed discussion of the actual practical experience of being a parent with its deliberations judgements and dilemmas In probing the ethical and conceptual questions suggested by the parent child relationship this unique volume demonstrates the irreducible philosophical richness of this relationship and thus provides an important counter balance to the overly empirical and largely psychological focus of a great deal of parenting literature Unlike other analytic work on the parent child relationship and the educational role of parents this work draws on first person accounts of the day to day experience of being a parent in order to explore the ethical and epistemological aspects of this experience In so doing it exposes the limitations of some of the languages within which contemporary parenting is conceptualized and discussed and opens up a space for thinking about childrearing and the parent child relationship beyond and other than in terms of the languages which dominate the ways in which we generally think about it today
