Liaison ,1918      Liaison C. Anderson,1998-03      Life, Luck and Liaisons John Burgess,2020-11-18 The fifties in New Zealand were glory days It was a carefree time for children whose parents were finally happy that the war was over Everyone worked together to rebuild their lives and looked to the future I helped my father when I could spraying the orchards harvesting making hay and I attended a country school and mixed with local Maori families Aged eleven I went to Boarding School in Auckland It was a dramatic change and along with my regular studies I learnt to be independent and to think for myself Upon leaving school my parents had tertiary education in mind for me I had in mind joining the workforce My parents conceded and I left school with the intention to go farming I worked on differing types of farms in New Zealand followed by a stint in Australia working on broadacre farming techniques When I was sufficiently qualified I began work with my father on the family farm in the Waikato region After a period on the farm I found that I was unable to work amicably with my father and I took my leave For two years I crewed on two different yachts in the Pacific and Indonesian waters This was a period of adventure and personal development which has provided many of the anecdotes I have related here When I returned to the family farm it was obvious that my father and I still could not work together I left the farm for good and headed to the city to seek whatever came my way I worked at several casual jobs until I could afford to travel and I flew to London with the promise of a job there A new beginning another book      Omnibus Water Resources Development Act of 1976 United States.
