sweeping work of religious and psychological history Ann Taves explores the myriad ways in which believers and detractors interpreted these complex experiences in Anglo American culture between the mid eighteenth and early twentieth centuries Taves divides the book into three sections In the first ranging from 1740 to 1820 she examines the debate over trances visions and other involuntary experiences against the politically charged backdrop of Anglo American evangelicalism established churches Enlightenment thought and a legacy of religious warfare In the second part covering 1820 to 1890 she highlights the interplay between popular psychology particularly the ideas of animal magnetism and mesmerism and movements in popular religion the disestablishment of churches the decline of Calvinist orthodoxy the expansion of Methodism and the birth of new religious movements In the third section Taves traces the emergence of professional psychology between 1890 and 1910 and explores the implications of new ideas about the subconscious mind hypnosis hysteria and dissociation for the understanding of religious experience Throughout Taves follows evolving debates about whether fits trances and visions are natural and therefore not religious or supernatural and therefore religious She pays particular attention to a third interpretation proposed by such mediators as William James according to which these experiences are natural and religious Taves shows that ordinary people as well as educated elites debated the meaning of these experiences and reveals the importance of interactions between popular and elite culture in accounting for how people experienced religion and explained experience Combining rich detail with clear and rigorous argument this is a major contribution to our understanding of Protestant revivalism and the historical interplay between religion and psychology
