Gonas Gone:

Gona's Gone! David W. Cameron, 2023-08-02 With the Australian troops crossing of the Kumusi River in mid November 1942 after pushing the Japanese back along the Kokoda Track to the north coast of Papua New Guinea the time had come to face the entrenched Japanese at their beachheads at Gona Sanananda and Buna The Japanese were determined to fight to the last man in the defence of these critical positions The first beach to be captured by the Australians was Gona which fell on 9 December after bitter fighting This however was not the end of the fighting around this beachhead as just west of Gona on the opposite side of Gona Creek a larger Japanese Force had been landed which was intent on not only reinforcing Gona but also Sanananda and Buna both located east of Gona The fighting west of Gona Creek would be just as brutal and deadly as the fighting to take the Gona Beachhead Even so after this fighting Australian and American troops operating together for the first time in the Pacific War were still bogged down in the battles to take Sanananda and Buna the fighting at these beachheads would continue into January 1943

Gona J. G. Zomchick, 2010-10-25 Journey to a world beyond worlds To a place where hatred causes suffering and being different is death or for those who are willing to conform slavery This is the planet Piedra a place of awe inspiring imagination yet so real that the aroma of the sweat and blood of its people will grip your mind forbidding you sleep Where those who have nothing even the little they have will be taken away Still in all of this darkness there is hope and that one hope is Gona

Forging Trust Communities Irene S. Wu, 2015-07-29 Twenty historical case studies reveal how communication technology allows people to trust one another while mobilizing around a shared cause Bloggers in India used social media and wikis to broadcast news and bring humanitarian aid to tsunami victims in South Asia Terrorist groups like ISIS pour out messages and recruit new members on websites The Internet is the new public square bringing to politics a platform on which to create community at both the grassroots and bureaucratic level Drawing on historical and contemporary case studies from more than ten countries Irene S Wu s Forging Trust Communities argues that the Internet and the technologies that predate it catalyze political change by creating new opportunities for cooperation The Internet does not simply enable faster and easier communication but makes it possible for people around the world to interact closely reciprocate favors and build trust The information and ideas exchanged by members of these cooperative communities become key sources of political power akin to military might and economic strength Wu illustrates the rich world history of citizens and leaders exercising political power through communications technology People in nineteenth century China for example used the telegraph and newspapers to mobilize against the emperor In 1970 Taiwanese cable television gave voice to a political opposition demanding democracy Both Qatar in the 1990s and Great Britain in the 1930s relied on public broadcasters to enhance their influence abroad Additional case studies from Brazil Egypt the United States Russia India the Philippines and Tunisia reveal how various technologies function to create new political energy enabling activists to challenge institutions while allowing governments to increase their power at home and abroad Forging Trust Communities demonstrates that the way people receive and share information through network communities reveals as much about their political identity as their socioeconomic class ethnicity or religion Scholars and students in political science public administration international studies sociology and the history of science and technology will find this to be an insightful and indispensable work Sanananda: a Bastard of a Place David W.

Cameron,2024-12-04 With the Australian troops crossing of the Kumusi River in mid November 1942 after pushing the Japanese back along the Kokoda Track to the north coast of Papua New Guinea the time had come to face the entrenched Japanese at their beachhead at Gona Buna and Sanananda The end of the Kokoda Campaign in mid November 1942 marked a turning point for the Australians but the fighting was far from over Within days the battles for the Japanese beachheads would commence The fighting for the Japanese beachheads was among the fiercest of the whole Pacific War and the first combined large scale operation between Australian and American troops against the Japanese By the 3rd January 1943 the Japanese beachheads at Gona and Buna were finally in Australian and American hands after almost two months of desperate fighting One beachhead however remained to be taken the best defended not only in terms of its deep defence and network of supporting bunkers and slit trenches but also by its large deep swamps and jungle Hundreds of men had already been killed Australian and American in trying to take Sanananda It was recognised that this beachhead was the worst of the three battlefields Isolated pockets of Australians and Americans confronted well dug in and camouflaged positions often on small islands in the fetid and crocodile infested swamps It would be another three weeks before Sanananda fell to the Australian and American forces It was appropriately described by Sergeant Bill Spencer 2 9th Battalion as A bastard of a place

Forty one Australian soldiers died in action over 20 years of fighting in Afghanistan in that time more than 1400 veterans have taken their own lives Veterans today are chronically over represented when it comes to PTSD depression homelessness and suicide Australians rightfully pause on Anzac Day each year to solemnly remember fallen soldiers but are we forgetting our returned veterans whose personal battles continue every single day and how did we get to this point In this authoritative compelling and urgent book bestselling author Patrick Lindsay The Spirit of the Digger and Fromelles among many looks at the wide ranging damage caused by training Australians to be fighting machines and then inadequately supporting them as they re enter their communities Featuring moving interviews with veterans and their families as well as a broader analysis of Australian military culture and government responses Lindsay illustrates both the personal and societal costs of this dereliction of duty The Home Front is a fascinating and rousing indictment of the culture of war the thinking of those who wage it and the cost to those who experience it Walking with Ghosts in Papua New Guinea Rick Antonson, 2019-09-10

Acclaimed travel writer Rick Antonson Full Moon Over Noah s Ark tackles his most challenging adventure yet a formidable trail through the remote jungles of Papua New Guinea Rick Antonson has traveled to parts of the world that are not simply exotic but sometimes damned near inaccessible He has climbed to the summit of Mount Ararat in eastern Turkey traveling beyond to Iraq and Iran and Armenia He has undertaken an improbable overland journey to the ancient city of Timbuktu an enlightening look into efforts to preserve the city s priceless manuscripts Now he has traversed the notorious Kokoda Trail in Papua New Guinea a country some call the last wild place on earth The trail is a narrow 60 mile footpath featuring rough jungle 6 000 feet in elevation change and punishing weather extremes In a country unfairly locked in Western misperceptions the track is inhospitable terrain yet home to hospitable indigenous peoples who live among the rusting reminders of the Japanese Australian and American armies that clashed in some of the deadliest protracted combat of World War II In Walking With Ghosts in Papua New Guinea Antonson shares a journey of physical and mental endurance in his inimitable way in the

A History of Modern Wars of Attrition Carter Malkasian, 2002-01-30 A war of attrition is usually conceptualized as a bloody slogging match epitomized by imagery of futile frontal assaults on the Western Front of the First World War As such many academics politicians and military officers currently consider attrition to be a wholly undesirable method of warfare This first book length study of wars of attrition challenges this viewpoint A historical analysis of the strategic thought behind attrition demonstrates that it was often implemented to conserve casualties not to engage in a bloody senseless assault Moreover attrition frequently proved an effective means of attaining a state's political aims in warfare particularly in serving as a preliminary to decisive warfare reducing risk of escalation and coercing an opponent in negotiations Malkasian analyzes the thought of commanders who implemented policies of attrition from 1789 to the present His study includes figures central to the study of war such as the Duke of Wellington Carl von Clausewitz B H Liddell Hart General William Slim General Douglas MacArthur General Matthew Ridgeway and General William Westmoreland While special attention is devoted to the Second World War in the Pacific and the Korean War this study notes the utility of attrition during the Cold War as the risk of a Third World War rendered more aggressive strategies unattractive Increasingly the United States finds itself facing conflicts that are not amenable to a decisive military solution in which opponents seek prolonged war that will inflict as many casualties as possible on American forces

More than Bombs and Bandages Kirsty Harris, 2024-06-05 More than Bombs and Bandages exposes the false assumption that military nurses only nursed Based on author Kirsty Harris CEW Bean Prize winning PhD thesis this is a book that is far removed from the devotion to duty stereotyping offering an intriguing and sometimes gut wrenching insight into the Australian Army Nursing Service AANS during World War I More than Bombs and Bandages provides rich pickings for all those interested in nursing history women in the Australian military the application of medical treatments and World War I What I enjoyed most about is Dr Kirsty Harris's ability to reflect those nurses' voices in a way that was so real one could be there the settings were so well understood from her research and the language kind of made a time warp in the reading Very satisfying As you know I have that Peter Rees book but I could not get into it after reading the historical one It was like comparing a great documentary to Facebook trivia Rev d Dr Barbara Oudt
