question repeatedly refusing to accept as inevitable the marginalization of his community within the newly established state Inspired by the example of the Revivalist generation he challenged his compatriots to approach modern Irish identity in terms complementary rather than exclusivist In the process of doing so he produced a corpus of literary essays European in stature informed by extensive travel deep reading and an active engagement with the political and social upheavals of his age His insistence on the necessity of Protestant participation in Irish life coupled with his challenges to received Catholic opinion made him a contentious figure on both sides of the sectarian divide This study addresses not only Butler's remarkable personal career but also some of the larger themes to which he consistently drew attention the need to balance Irish cosmopolitanism with local relationships to address the compromises of the Second World War and the hypocrisies of the Cold War to promote a society in which constructive dissent might not just be tolerated but valued As a result by the end of his life Butler came to be recognised as a forerunner of the more tolerant and expansive Ireland of today
