with the cultural contributions each made to what became a distinct Appalachian culture Next focusing on the folk culture of Appalachia Rehder details such cultural expressions as architecture and landscape design traditional and more recent ways of making a living both legal and illegal foodstuffs and cooking techniques folk remedies and belief systems music art and the folk festivals that today attract visitors from around the world and the region's dialect With its broad scope and deep research Appalachian Folkways accurately and evocatively chronicles a way of life that is fast disappearing

People, Power, Places Sally Ann McMurry, Annmarie Adams, 2000 From workers cottages in Milwaukee's Polish community to Alaskan homesteads during the Great Depression from early American retail stores to nineteenth century prisons different types of buildings reflect the diverse responses of people to their architectural needs Through inquiry into such topics the contributors to this volume examine a variety of building forms as they assess the current state of vernacular architecture studies Because scholars in vernacular architecture have come to consider thematic questions rather than simply to look at types of structures the essays chosen for this collection address issues of how people power and places intersect They demonstrate not only the inextricable links between people and place but also show how power relationships are defined by spatial organization and how this use of space has helped define the distinction between private and public The essays examine a wide range of forms from camp meetings to trolley cottages to consider what buildings might reveal about their makers users and even interpreters One article for example will give readers a new appreciation of balloon framing in Midwest farmhouses refuting popular notions that it was a single individual's invention Another considers servants quarters in Apartheid era South Africa to explore the relationship between black domestic workers and their white employers Drawn from the Vernacular Architecture Forum conferences of 1996 and 1997 these thirteen essays make significant contributions to the study of design and building processes and the adaptation of architectural forms and spaces over time They help redefine the scope of vernacular and provide new models for better understanding the built environment The Editors Sally McMurry is professor of history at Pennsylvania State University and author of Families and Farmhouses in Nineteenth Century America Annmarie Adams is associate professor of architecture at McGill University and author of Architecture in the Family Way Doctors Houses and Women 1870-1900

Winner of the Abbott Lowell Cummings Prize and the Gustav O Arlt Award in Humanities The Appalachian community of Hollybush first settled in 1881 grew to a population of some 150 people on thirty farm sites Charles Martin shows that its abandonment in 1960 resulted from technological change which brought social upheaval manifested in the region s now vanished architecture Martin s analysis makes innovative use of the techniques of oral history and material culture The essential data incorporated within the building survey document the physical displacement that occurred in the community as it attempted to switch from an agrarian to an industrial system The author assesses the resulting social conflict showing how coal provided the catalyst for change to which residents so profoundly reacted In the experience of Hollybush the author discovers a paradigm of the social changes wrought by industrialism elsewhere in America

Master Plan for the Development, Management, and Protection of the Rugby Colony Historic Area ,1984 Liberia, South Carolina

John M. Coggeshall,2018-04-10 In 2007 while researching mountain culture in upstate South Carolina anthropologist John M Coggeshall stumbled upon the small community of Liberia in the Blue Ridge foothills There he met Mable Owens Clarke and her family the remaining members of a small African American community still living on land obtained immediately after the Civil War This intimate history tells the story of five generations of the Owens family and their friends and neighbors chronicling their struggles through slavery Reconstruction the Jim Crow era and the desegregation of the state Through hours of interviews with Mable and her relatives as well as friends and neighbors Coggeshall presents an ethnographic history that allows members of a largely ignored community to speak and record their own history for the first time This story sheds new light on the African American experience in Appalachia and in it Coggeshall documents the community s 150 year history of resistance to white oppression while offering a new way to understand the symbolic relationship between residents and the land they occupy tying together family memory and narratives to explain this connection
