

IX. 1]

This verse is a corollary to the last: we might paraphrase—('to lose his own life'), the possession which he would not exchange away for anything'.

25. Connexion:—'and anyone who cannot accept discipleship on these terms, who (like Peter just now) feels that a suffering Master is a approach to himself, I cannot ultimately accept'. Note the greatness of the claim which Jesus makes, alongside with His prediction of His own humiliation: this paradox was the great stumbling-block to all current ideas about the Messiah.

παῦλα. The language recalls that of the O.T. prophets, with whom faithfulness to God is often spoken of as 'adultery'.

ἐν τῇ δόξῃ καὶ. These words suggest that Jesus will have 'glory', but a spiritual glory, not the earthly splendour which the popular imagination demanded of the Messiah.

IX. 1. This additional remark, probably made to the disciples alone, seems suggested by the mention of the 'glory' in the last verse. After telling them of His coming humiliation, He reassures them with a promise that He will also have a splendour of His own, and that they, the partners of His humiliation, shall witness that too. Possibly they had asked some question which led to this statement.

ἐπὶ λέγου ὅτι, n. on iii. 28.

ὅδε τῶν ἰσθηκόντων, lit. 'here, among the bystanders'. In Matt. xxi. 73 and elsewhere the simple verb is used in the sense of vape-επιμένει.

ὅτι μὴ γινώσκονται κατὰ. 'The Kingdom of God come with power' may mean any great manifestation of the power of God. But for the word ταῖς, which implies that some would be dead before the time spoken of, it would be natural to find the fulfilment of this promise in the Transfiguration, which occurred a few days later. But Jesus here speaks in the manner of an ancient prophet, and it is not therefore necessary to limit His words to one fulfilment: the wonderful spread of the 'news of the Kingdom' very soon after His ascension might well be thus described: so also still more might the destruction of Jerusalem about 40 years later than this time, which marked the end of the old Dispensation and the establishment in its place of the new Israel, the Christian Church. In any case the lesson enforced is that the disciples are right in expecting the Messiah to 'manifest His glory', but wrong in expecting the manifestation to be of a material kind. Thus these words contain the germ of the great prophecy of xiii.

ἀληθεύσαν, perfect, 'having come', i.e. 'established'.
