Olmec Lithic Economy at San Lorenzo Kenneth Hirth, Ann Cyphers, 2020-08-15 Olmec Lithic Economy at San Lorenzo examines the specialized craft production manufacturing adoption and spread of obsidian cutting tools at San Lorenzo Mexico the first major Olmec center to develop in the southern Gulf Coast region of Mesoamerica Through the systematic analysis of this single commodity Kenneth Hirth and Ann Cyphers reconstruct the importation of raw material and the on site production and distribution of finished goods from a specialized workshop engaged in the manufacture of obsidian blades The obsidian blade was the cutting tool of choice across Mesoamerica and used in a wide range of activities from domestic food preparation to institutional ritual activities Hirth and Cyphers conducted a three decade investigation of obsidian artifacts recovered at Puerto Malpica the earliest known workshop and seventy six other sites on San Lorenzo Island where these tools were manufactured for local and regional distribution Evidence recovered from these excavations provides some of the first information on how early craft specialists operated and how the specialized technology used to manufacture obsidian blades spread across Mesoamerica The authors use geochemical analyses to identify thirteen different sources for obsidian during San Lorenzo s occupation This volcanic glass not locally available was transported over great distances arriving in nodular and finished blade form Olmec Lithic Economy at San Lorenzo offers a new way to analyze the Preclassic lithic economy the procurement production distribution and consumption of flaked stone tools and shows how the study of lithics aids in developing a comprehensive picture of the internal structure and operation of Olmec economy The book will be significant for Mesoamericanists as well as students and scholars interested in economy lithic technology and early complex societies

Lithic Technological Organization and Paleoenvironmental Change Erick Robinson, Frédéric Sellet, 2017-11-06 The objective of this edited volume is to bring together a diverse set of analyses to document how small scale societies responded to paleoenvironmental change based on the evidence of their lithic technologies The contributions bring together an international forum for interpreting changes in technological organization embracing a wide range of time periods geographic regions and methodological approaches As technology brings more refined information on ancient climates the research on spatial and temporal variability of paleoenvironmental changes In turn this has also broadened considerations of the many ways that prehistoric hunter gatherers may have responded to fluctuations in resource bases From an archaeological perspective stone tools and their associated debitage provide clues to understanding these past choices and decisions and help to further the investigation into how variable human responses may have been. Despite significant advances in the theory and methodology of lithic technological analysis there have been few attempts to link these developments to paleoenvironmental research on a global scale.

Prehistoric Stone Tools of Eastern Africa John J. Shea, 2020-04-16 A detailed overview of the Eastern African stone tools that make up the world's longest archaeological record

The Oxford Handbook of African Archaeology Peter Mitchell, Paul Lane, 2013-07-04 Africa has the longest and arguably the most diverse archaeological record of any of the continents. It is where the human lineage first evolved and from where Homo sapiens spread across the rest of the world. Later it witnessed novel experiments in food production and unique trajectories to urbanism and the organisation of large communities that were not always structured along strictly hierarchical lines. Millennia of engagement with societies in other parts of the world confirm Africa's active participation in the construction of the modern world while the richness of its history, ethnography and linguistics provide unusually powerful opportunities for constructing interdisciplinary narratives of Africa's past. This Handbook provides a comprehensive and up to date synthesis of African archaeology covering the entirety of the continent's past from the beginnings of human evolution to the archaeological legacy of European colonialism. As well as covering almost all periods and regions of the continent it includes a mixture of key methodological and theoretical issues and debates and situates the subject's contemporary practice within the discipline's history and the infrastructural challenges now facing its practitioners. Bringing together essays on all these themes from over seventy contributors many of them living and working in Africa it offers a highly accessible contemporary account of the subject for use by scholars and students of not only archaeology but also history, anthropology and other disciplines.

From Quarry to Cornfield Charles Cobb, 2000 From Quarry to Cornfield provides an innovative model for examining the technology of hoe production and its contribution to the agriculture of Mississippian communities. Lithic specialist Charles Cobb examines the political economy in Mississippian communities through a case study of raw material procurement and hoe production and usage at the Mill Creek site on Dillow Ridge in southwest Illinois. Cobb outlines the day to day activities in a Mississippian chiefdom village that flourished from about A.D. 1250 to 1500. In so doing he provides a fascinating window into the specialized tasks of a variety of day laborers whose contribution to the community rested on their production of stone hoes necessary in the task of feeding the village. Overlooked in most previous studies the skills and creativity of the makers of the hoes used in village farming provide a basis for broader analysis of the technology of hoe use in Mississippian times. Although Cobb's work focuses on Mill Creek his findings at this site are representative of the agricultural practices of Mississippian communities throughout the eastern United States. The theoretical underpinnings of Cobb's study make a clear case for a reexamination of the accepted definition of chiefdom, the mobilization of surplus labor and issues of power history and agency in Mississippian times In a well crafted piece of writing Cobb distinguishes himself as one of the leaders in the study of lithic technology From Quarry to Cornfield will find a well deserved place in the ongoing discussions of power and production in the Mississippian political economy Morphometrics for Nonmorphometricians

Bauer,2007-12-31

Although the Cuzco Valley of Peru is renowned for being the heartland of the Incas little is known concerning its pre Inca inhabitants Until recently it was widely believed that the first inhabitants of the Cuzco Valley were farmers who lived in scattered villages along the valley floor ca 1000 BC and that there were no Archaic Period remains in the region This perspective was challenged during a systematic survey of the valley when numerous preceramic sites were found Additional information came from excavations at the site of Kasapata the largest preceramic site identified during the survey It is now clear that the Cuzco Valley was inhabited like many other regions of the Andes soon after the retreat of the Pleistocene glaciers and that it supported thriving cultures of hunters and foragers for hundreds of generations before the advent of permanent settlements This edited volume provides the first overview of the Archaic Period 9000 2200 BC in the Cuzco Valley The chapters include a detailed discussion of the distribution of Archaic sites in the valley as well as the result of excavations at the site of Kasapata Separate chapters are dedicated to examining the lithics human burials faunal remains and obsidian recovered at this remarkably well preserved site An Introduction to Zooarchaeology Diane

Gifford-Gonzalez,2018-04-03 This volume is a comprehensive critical introduction to vertebrate zooarchaeology the field that explores the history of human relations with animals from the Pliocene to the Industrial Revolution The book is organized into five sections each with an introduction that leads the reader systematically through this swiftly expanding field Section One presents a general introduction to zooarchaeology key definitions and an historical survey of the emergence of zooarchaeology in the Americas Europe Asia and Africa and introduces the conceptual approach taken in the book This volume is designed to allow readers to integrate data from the book along with that acquired elsewhere within a coherent analytical framework Most of its chapters take the form of critical review articles providing a portal into both the classic and current literature and contextualizing these with original commentary Summaries of findings are enhanced by profuse illustrations by the author and others Archaeological Soil and Sediment Micromorphology Cristiano Nicosia,Georges
