Eye Know How:

Stroke Book Jonathan Alexander, 2021-10-05 An archive of personal trauma that addresses how a culture still toxic to queer people can reshape a body In the summer of 2019 Jonathan Alexander had a minor stroke what his doctors called an eye stroke A small bit of cholesterol came loose from a vein in his neck and instead of shooting into his brain and causing damage it lodged itself in a branch artery of his retina resulting in a permanent blindspot in his right eye In Stroke Book Alexander recounts both the immediate aftermath of his health crisis which marked deeper health concerns as well as his experiences as a queer person subject to medical intervention A pressure that the queer ill contend with is feeling at fault for their condition of having somehow chosen illness as punishment for their queerness however subconsciously Queer people often experience psychic and somatic pressures that not only decrease their overall quality of life but can also lead to shorter lifespans Emerging out of a medical emergency and a need to think and feel that crisis through the author's sexuality changing sense of disability and experience of time Stroke Book invites readers on a personal journey of facing a health crisis while trying to understand how one's sexual identity affects and is affected by that crisis Piecing and stitching together his experience in a queered diary form Alexander's lyrical prose documents his ongoing unfolding experience in the aftermath of the stroke Through the fracturing of his text which almost mirrors his fractured sight post stroke the author grapples with his shifted experience of time weaving in and out while he tracks the aftermath of what he comes to call his incident and meditates on how a history of homophobic encounters can manifest in embodied forms The book situates itself within a larger queer tradition of writing first about the body then about the body unbecoming and then yet further about the body ongoing even in the shadow of death Stroke Book also documents the complexities of critique and imagination while holding open a space for dreaming pleasure intimacy and the unexpected

Open Your Mind Ja'mar L. Johnson, 2012-08-24 This is Poetry at its best Same blood same flesh and same chemical composition We breathe we eat we think and we feel Our only difference is PERCEPTION The way in which we view people places and things based on what we know and how we feel and or have felt The glass can be half full and or half empty Growth and development comes in stages as children we see in black in white as young adults we see in black white and grey and as Men to make the best of everything to always breathe easy and what I feel is most important was the ability to lose small My book is a lot of deep thoughts self reflection over years of studies I don't believe that emotions should have the right to override intellect The mind controls the body so I think and I dare you to think also The choices we make are based on what we want and or feel we need to Your choices are yours and they may or may not affect my life but consequences come with all choices choose wisely Just know that you chose conscious or not Email me at Openyourmind0012 gmail com Open Your Mind See As Eye See is also on facebook Feel free to let me know what you think
