Numeral Classifiers and Classifier Languages Chungmin Lee, Young-Wha Kim, Byeong-Uk Yi, 2021-02-17 Focusing mainly on classifiers Numeral Classifiers and Classifier Languages offers a deep investigation of three major classifier languages Chinese Japanese and Korean This book provides detailed discussions well supported by empirical evidence and corpus analyses Theoretical hypotheses regarding differences and commonalities between numeral classifier languages and other mainly article languages are tested to seek universals or typological characteristics The essays collected here from leading scholars in different fields promise to be greatly significant in the field of linguistics for several reasons First it targets three representative classifier languages in Asia It also provides critical clues and suggests solutions to syntactic semantic psychological and philosophical issues about classifier constructions Finally it addresses ensuing debates that may arise in the field of linguistics in general and neighboring inter disciplinary areas This book should be of great interest to advanced students and scholars of East Asian languages Words and the Mind Barbara Malt, Phillip Wolff, 2010-03-01 The study of word meanings promises important insights into the nature of the human mind by revealing what people find to be most cognitively significant in their experience However as we learn more about the semantics of various languages we are faced with an interesting problem Different languages seem to be telling us different stories about the mind For example important distinctions made in one language are not necessarily made in others What are we to make of these cross linguistic differences How do they arise Are they created by purely linguistic processes operating over the course of language evolution Or do they reflect fundamental differences in thought In this sea of differences are there any semantic universals Which categories might be given by the genes which by culture and which by language And what might the cross linguistic similarities and differences contribute to our understanding of conceptual and linguistic development The kinds of mapping principles structures and processes that link language and non linguistic knowledge must accommodate not just one language but the rich diversity that has been uncovered The integration of knowledge and methodologies necessary for real progress in answering these questions has happened only recently as experimental approaches have been applied to the cross linguistic study of word meaning In Words and the Mind Barbara Malt and Phillip Wolff present evidence from the leading researchers who are carrying out this empirical work on topics as diverse as spatial relations events emotion terms motion events objects body part terms causation color categories and relational categories By bringing them together Malt and Wolff highlight some of the most exciting cross linguistic and cross cultural work on the language thought interface from a broad array of fields including linguistics anthropology cognitive and developmental psychology and cognitive neuropsychology Their results provide some answers to these questions and new perspectives on the issues surrounding them

Categories and Case William O'Grady, 1991-05-08 The principal objective of this book is to provide a unified treatment of morphological case in Korean Focussing on the nominative accusative and dative suffixes the author seeks to show that each of these morphemes consistently encodes a corresponding combinatorial relation in the surface form of sentences In support of his analysis the author discusses a broad and representative range of Korean case marking patterns providing one of the more complete treatments of case available for any language This book should therefore be useful not only to Koreanists but also to researchers interested in the case systems of other languages Written in a style that makes it accessible to readers from a variety of backgrounds in linguistics and other disciplines Categories and Case also provides a good introduction to many important syntactic phenomena in the Korean language

Causatives and Transitivity Bernard Comrie, Maria Polinsky, 1993-09-09 This volume brings together 18 typological studies of causative and related constructions transitivity voice other expressions of cause by 19 scholars from North America Western Europe and Russia The inspirations for the volume is the pioneering work on causative constructions by the Leningrad Typology Group several of the contributors have close connections to the charter members of that group others have appreciated this work from a distance The volume as a whole is based on the concept of causative constructions as embracing both morphology and syntax with an important semantic component as well In addition to general studies concerning the morpho syntactic and semantic typology and the history of causative constructions and relations to other phenomena the following individual languages are treated in detail Russian English Dutch Svan Even Korean Yukaghir Alutor Aleut Haruai Dogon Athabaskan languages The volume will be of interest to typologists to other linguists interested in causative constructions and transitivity relations and to all who are interested in the linguistic expression of causal relations
