Information System Development Process:

Modeling Business Processes Wil Van Der Aalst, M.P., Christian Stahl, 2011-05-27 An introduction to the modeling of business information systems with processes formally modeled using Petri nets This comprehensive introduction to modeling business information systems focuses on business processes It describes and demonstrates the formal modeling of processes in terms of Petri nets using a well established theory for capturing and analyzing models with concurrency The precise semantics of this formal method offers a distinct advantage for modeling processes over the industrial modeling languages found in other books on the subject Moreover the simplicity and expressiveness of the Petri nets concept make it an ideal language for explaining foundational concepts and constructing exercises After an overview of business information systems the book introduces the modeling of processes in terms of classical Petri nets This is then extended with data time and hierarchy to model all aspects of a process Finally the book explores analysis of Petri net models to detect design flaws and errors in the design process The text accessible to a broad audience of professionals and students keeps technicalities to a minimum and offers numerous examples to illustrate the concepts covered Exercises at different levels of difficulty make the book ideal for independent study or classroom use understanding and knowledge based assistance for the development and maintenance of database intensive information systems became apparent. The group of John Mylopoulos at the University of Toronto and their European collaborators moved from semantic models of information systems design. Taxis project towards earlier stages of the software lifecycle. Joachim Schmidt's group at the University of Hamburg completed their early work on the design and implementation of database programming languages Pascal R and began to consider tools for the development of large database program packages. The Belgian company BIM developed a fast commercial Prolog which turned out to be useful as an implementation language for object oriented knowledge representation schemes and as a prototyping tool for formal design models. Case studies by Vasant Dhar and Matthias Jarke in New York pointed out the need for formally representing process knowledge and a number of projects in the US and Europe began to consider computer assistance CASE as a viable approach to support software engineering. In 1985 the time appeared ripe for an attempt at integrating these experiences in a comprehensive CASE framework relating all phases of an information systems lifecycle. The Commission of the European Communities decided in early 1986 to fund this joint effort by six European software houses and research institutions in the Software Technology section of the ESPRIT I program. The project was given the number 892 and the title DAIDA Development Assistance for Intelligent Database Applications.
