Postharvest Biotechnology of Flowers and Ornamental Plants Dattajirao K. Salunkhe, Narayana R. Bhat, Babasaheb B. Desai, 2012-12-06. The floricultural industry has been undergoing an unprecedented revolution in terms of the type of commodity produced and the production and marketing technology in both developed and developing countries. As a result of this revolution as we know today there is a flower for every purpose and for every person in the world as is evident from the slogan of the Society for American Florists: say it with flowers. In recent years the Latin American and European countries have become sizeable competitors for the North American fresh flower markets and the trend continues growing. Like any other crop production floricultural production can be divided into three basic factors: 1 production costs, 2 quality, 3 transportation costs. All these must be optimum for this area or industry to be safe from competition. With increasing consumer awareness and the current recession the pressure from the artificial floral products industry and also of neighbouring countries on the American fresh flower industry and continued competition even amongst the growers, wholesalers and retailers, quality in floricultural industry is becoming increasingly important to all those concerned with handling these products. The visual quality aspects of the product are the sole determiner of consumer acceptability in this industry and unlike fruits and vegetables flowers cannot be marketed by just discarding the damaged portion. Cut Flowers United States Tariff Commission, 1934.
