

Handling Common Accidents

Despite our best efforts, accidents still happen. When they do, it's crucial not to panic. Calm thinking and thoughtful actions can keep accidents from becoming worse. Remember, all accidents or injuries must be reported to your teacher. While your teacher will probably handle most serious situations, you should understand how common lab injuries are treated.

Injury/Accident	Response
chemicals in the eyes	Flush with water for at least 15 minutes. If you have contact lenses, remove them after you have rinsed your eyes for several minutes. Seek medical attention.
minor heat burns	Cool the area with water or ice wrapped in a cloth. If minor blistering occurs, apply a sterile bandage.
chemical burns	Flush the area with water or an approved neutralizer. Remove contaminated clothing. Seek medical attention for significant burns or allergic reactions.
cuts	Wash the area with soap and water and cover with a sterile bandage. If there is significant bleeding, apply pressure with a sterile bandage and seek medical attention.
inhalation of dust or vapor	Move to fresh air. Seek medical attention if irritation or breathing difficulty occurs.
swallowing chemicals	Identify the chemical involved and seek medical attention and/or contact a Poison Control Center.
chemical spills	Hazardous or corrosive chemical spills should be handled by your teacher.
fires	Smother small fires with a fire blanket or container (such as a beaker). For larger fires, evacuate the area and use a fire extinguisher only if you can do so safely. When in doubt, call the fire department. Smother clothing fires with a fire blanket or drop and roll to extinguish the flames.
broken glass	Do not handle broken glass with your bare hands— it's extremely sharp. Sweep up fragments in a dustpan and discard in an authorized trash container.

Chemical Labels

Being informed is the best way to be safe with chemicals. Even household chemicals can be harmful under certain conditions. The best place to learn about a chemical is its label. Household chemicals provide detailed hazard and safety information right on the label. Read it carefully for each new chemical that you encounter.

Laboratory-grade chemicals are different. Instead of having a detailed container label, they come with a document called a Material Safety Data Sheet (MSDS). Laboratories keep these in a notebook so that people can easily consult them. In addition to the MSDS, laboratory-grade chemicals also include a simple kind of container label that's very informative. Called the Hazardous Materials Identification System
