Adnan Inner China Eva Sjödin, 2005 Fiction Translated from the Swedish by Jennifer Hayashida INNER CHINA is the first of Eva Sjödin's books to be translated into English It is the poetic narrative of a young girl navigating a tenuous yet vibrant landscape of hardship and neglect resilience and self reliance By turns catastrophic and luminous INNER CHINA in Jennifer Hayashida's translation is unflinching in its gaze economical in its language and fearless as it enters the difficult terrain that is childhood Here the interior and exterior worlds the magical and the mundane collide brutally and beautifully Genya Turovskaya In Eva Sjödin's INNER CHINA the imaginative life born of the desire for heaven for somewhere else is the starkest reminder that we reside not there but here on earth While heaven and dirt cave in twist together the young narrator makes a life and language of the fertile and porous nature beyond her cold realities an emotional world marked by decay and resilience This tale is then also a map of the human psyche as it maneuvers around that which threatens its body E Tracy Grinnell INNER CHINA the first of Sjödin's works to be translated into English consists of a series of poems that form a narrative about a young girl dealing with hard times and being neglected by relying on herself and never giving up she embarks on a moving journey of self discovery Translation Review Aufgabe, 2004 Counter Daemons Roberto Young The City Visible William Allegrezza, Raymond L. Bianchi, 2007 Poetry This anthology brings together a sampling of some of the best poets working in Chicago and the surrounding region From all corners of the city these poets are crafting a voice for Chicago literature in the new century When Carl Sandburg asked in his Chicago Poems close to a hundred years ago for a voice to speak to me in the day end A hand to touch me in the dark room Breaking the long loneliness little did he know his city would be so fully and lovingly answered and so honored Chicago is once again transformed by poetry Here in these myriad acts of imagination the poets of THE CITY VISIBLE give to it again in Shakespeare's terms a local habitation and a name Peter Gizzi

Notebooks, 1956-1978 Danielle Collobert, 2003 Poetry Translated from the French by Norma Cole Born into a Breton family active in the Resistance during the Second World War Danielle Collobert moved to Paris at the age of 19 There she took her own life in the summer of 1978 These notebooks were found in her possession at the time of her death Beyond everything she has discovered her own utter nakedness that owned by nights of relentless attention to the other or reflected in mirrors of all night cafés where you can look listen or simply wait attending the blank page from which the lassitude of daybreak will rescue you overwhelm you Uccio Esposito Torrigiani from the Postface She enunciates the words for desire and for loss of the other words with harrowing intensity and explores the limits of the phenomenal body and of speech by the agency of a prose which defies category Michael Palmer In Danielle Collobert s NOTEBOOKS the urgency of her writing is accompanied by the weight of hindsight that we know how it ends and yet it is not stifled by morbidity Instead the intensity and integrity of her struggles rise to the surface Collobert s questions of presence in the world of politics and intimacy are constantly recovered from the blur of experience Collobert moves towards and away in a feverish attempt to connect stay connected whether in her personal encounters moments of activism or writing and though she ultimately chooses death there is enough life in her writing to carry on the hum of life all around I open and I close E Tracy Grinnell Indelible fragments Jeff Jackson The text of this book is sourced from several notebooks and loose pages found in the Paris hotel room where Danielle Collobert committed suicide Spanning over 20 years of her life the text in form resembles the poetry of It Then though the content is in most cases less abstract Fragmented phrases separated by dashes describe her interior life her extensive travels her relationships with men though always rather vaguely her recurring need for solitude and above all her experiences with writing Throughout there is a haunting hunted desperation in her words as in each new place she finds herself she encounters the same familiar struggles with indifference and anxiety always with death not far from her mind S D Stewart
