Contemporary Economic Issues in Developing Countries

John Baffoe-Bonnie, Mohammed Khayum, 2003-04-30 Important lessons for policy makers are provided here as contributors evaluate the effectiveness of domestic economic policies and the recommendations of international organizations such as the World Bank regarding the economic development of developing countries Challenges posed by debt problems corruption population dynamics poverty and the absence of adequate human and physical capital are highlighted Contributors cast doubts on the conclusions of the prevailing theories of economic development with patterns of economic change over the course of the 20th century Their findings point out the issue of inadequate social capability as a critical factor in understanding the lack of economic development in many developing countries They suggest that contemporary theorizing tends to pinpoint necessary but insufficient conditions for the successful implementation of development strategies in these countries

Environmental Economics in Developing Countries

Achiransu Acharyya, 2022-11-02 The COVID 19 pandemic has laid bare the vulnerabilities of socio economic systems globally and exposed the risks that natural capital degradation imposes on human health economy and society This book studies the environmental challenges faced by developing economies in a post COVID 19 world Exploring diverse case studies from South Asia and Sub Saharan Africa the volume discusses the impact that economic development and recently COVID 19 has had on the environment ecology and economy of these regions It analyses nature conservation policies aimed at minimizing ecological damage arising from economic development and discusses the policy objectives of sustainable development It also highlights the significant role that environmental economics networks have played in capacity building framing of policies using ecological economics tools and developing a local leadership trained in addressing local sustainability issues An important contribution to the study of environmental economics of the Global South the book will be of interest to students and researchers of economics environment development studies development economics environmental policies and South Asia studies It will also be useful for policymakers and NGOs working in this field Environmental Sustainability Raghbendra Jha, K.V. Bhanu Murthy, 2006-09-27 With globalization fast becoming an irreversible process it is necessary to pay increased attention to the implications for environmental sustainability. However, the so-called environmental Kuznets curve (EKC) argument implies that rapid economic growth in many developing countries should be environmentally unsustainable. Environmental Sustainability addresses this dichotomy and articulates a notion of consumption sustainability that is both universal and pertains to the indefinite future. Additionally, it emphasizes the importance of addressing a broad spectrum of sources of environmental degradation and relates this measure to an index of economic achievement more complete than per capita income. As well as the EKC, authors Jha and Murthy also critique the Environmental Sustainability Index (ESI) and empirically substantiate the proposition that a certain type of development in the presently high income countries is primarily responsible for global environmental degradation. Several policy conclusions for global environmental management are also advanced. Throughout Jha and Murthy comprehensively evaluate existing approaches to environmental sustainability and critically review empirical studies of environmental degradation and economic development, making this an invaluable source of information for those concerned with environmental economics and political economy.

Environmental Justice in Developing Countries Rhuks Ako, 2013-08-15 The evolving environmental justice paradigm is conceptualized differently based on political, economic, and historical factors. In developed countries, emphasis is placed on the role of individuals in environmental decision making and the protection of their access to the prerequisite environmental information and capacity to challenge environmental decisions is the main focus. However, in developing countries, access to land and natural resources are considered integral elements of the environmental justice paradigm. This book focuses on the conceptualization, recognition, and protection of environmental justice in developing countries. It explores the situation by engaging an analytical discourse of relevant legal provisions in four case study countries including Nigeria, South Africa, India, and Papua New Guinea. The comparative analysis of environmental justice in these countries presents a framework within which to appreciate the conceptualization of the environmental justice paradigm.

China's Economic Dilemmas in the 1990s, 1991 Sustainable Forestry Challenges for Developing Countries Matti Palo, G. Mery, 1996-10-31 This book is an outcome of a research project on Sustainable Forestry and the Environment in Developing Countries. The project has been run by Metsäntutkimuskeskus (METLA), the Finnish Forest Research Institute, since 1987 and will be completed this year. A major output by this project has so far been a report in three volumes on Deforestation or development in the Third World. The purpose of our multidisciplinary research project is to generate new knowledge about the causes of deforestation, its scenarios, and consequences. More knowledge is needed for more effective, efficient, and equitable public policy both at the national and international levels in supporting sustainable forestry in developing countries. Our project has specifically focused on 90 tropical countries as one group and on three subgroups by continents as well as the three case study countries: the Philippines, Ethiopia, and Chile. The University of Joensuu has been our active partner in the Philippine study. We have complemented the three cases by the analyses of Brazil and Indonesia, the two largest tropical forest owning countries. Some other interesting country studies were annexed to complement our book both by geography and expertise. The United Nations University World Institute for Development Economics Research (UNU-WIDER) in Helsinki, Finland, has also been partly engaged. Most of the results from its project on 'The Forest in the South and North in Context of Global Warming' will however be published later in a separate book.

The Environment and Emerging Development Issues: Volume 1 Partha Dasgupta, Karl-Göran Mäler, 2000-11-09. This book presents a set of authoritative studies of the role of environmental resources in the development process, written by some of the most expert professionals in a wide range of associated fields. Contributors address the problems connected with the management of local common property resources such as soil, water, forests, and their products, animals, and fisheries, and supply both explanations of existing situations and policies for the future. This volume will be the definitive codification of our understanding of geographically localized environmental problems.

The Environment and Emerging Development Issues Partha Dasgupta, Karl-Göran Mäler, 2000. Two and a half billion people are affected directly on a day-to-day basis by the allocation and use of purely local resources. Yet official development economics has concentrated on headline international issues and only recently begun to take account of the dependence of poor countries on their natural resources, the link between acute poverty and environmental degradation, and the problems associated with the management of local common property such as soil and soil cover, water, forests, and their products, animals, and fisheries. In this volume, part of the WIDER Program on the Economics of the Environment, expert contributors provide a set of authoritative studies of emerging development issues ranging from foundational matters to case studies, original research in areas where there has been a paucity of work, to survey papers. They address both analytic and empirical issues on the role of environmental resources in the development process, presenting explanations of existing situations and policies for the future. A wealth of interests and backgrounds is represented and reflected in the cross-fertilization between papers.

Encyclopedia of the Developing World Thomas M. Leonard, 2006. A comprehensive work on the historical and current status of developing countries.

Environmental Management: Issues and Concerns in Developing Countries Pradip K. Sikdar, 2021-03-17. This book deals with issues and concerns for the human environment in the developing countries, incorporating natural processes and systems, pollution, removal technology, energy conservation, environmental impact assessment, process, economics, culture, political structure, and societal equity from a management point of view. Solutions to the emerging problems of the environment need a paradigmatic shift in approach from a process-based model to a socio-political-economic model. Hence, environmental management should involve equality and control over use of the finite natural resources, and the balance between Earth's biocapacity and humanity's ecological footprint. Changes such as green technologies, human population stabilization, and adoption of ecologically harmonious lifestyles are absolutely essential and will require redesigning of political institutions policies and revisiting forgotten skills of sustainable practices of environmental management These challenges should centre on environment governance using the concepts of common property equity and security This book is relevant for academics professionals administrators and policy makers who are concerned with various aspects of environment management and governance Environmental and Economic Issues in Forestry Susan Shen,Arnoldo Contreras-Hermosilla,1995-01-01 World Bank Technical Paper No 281 Provides an overview of environmentally related priority issues in Asian forestry and contributes to the critical work of understanding the complex dynamics of those issues

Environmental Sustainability Fraser Smith,2020-02-05 In 1994 representatives from all over the world met in Costa Rica to discuss the impact of ecological economics on developing countries That groundbreaking conference laid the foundation for this new collection of research on environmental sustainability While most discussions on sustainable development focus on the industrialized nations Environmental Sustainability Practical Global Applications takes a different angle it presents the views of the developing countries themselves on issues such as wildlife resources in Nambia timber production in Costa Rica property rights and land reform in South Africa and other steps being taken to implement environmentally sustainable economies around the world This is an ideal text for students of natural and social sciences development professionals and entrepreneurs seeking opportunities for ecologically sustainable businesses Academics will find it useful as a source of current research and for making new contacts in the field For anyone interested in exploring the link between man and his environment specifically the relationship between economics and ecology Environmental Sustainability is a must Forum for Applied Research and Public Policy ,1993 Sustainable Urbanism in Developing Countries Uday

Chatterjee,Arindam Biswas,Jenia Mukherjee,Dinabandhu Mahata,2022-04-19 The mushrooming of illegal housing on the periphery of cities is one of the main consequences of rapid urbanisation associated with social and environmental problems in the developing countries Sustainable Urbanism in Developing Countries discusses the linkage between urbanism and sustainability and how sustainable urbanism can be implemented to overcome the problems of housing and living conditions in urban areas Through case studies from India Indonesia China etc using advanced GIS techniques this book analyses several planning and design criteria to solve the physical social and economic problems of urbanisation and refers to urban planning as an effective measure to protect and promote the cultural characteristics of specific locations in these developing countries FEATURES Investigates an interdisciplinary approach to urbanism including urban ecology ecosystem services sustainable landscapes and advanced geographical systems Analyses unique case studies of rapid urbanisation from a local to a national scale in countries such as India Sri Lanka China Bangladesh Malaysia and Indonesia and their global impact Examines the use of GIS and spatial statistics in analysing urban sprawl and the massive amount of data gathered by every operational activity of municipalities Focuses on the holistic perspective of sustainable urbanism and the harmony in the human nature relationship to achieve sustainable development Covers a wide range of issues manifested in urban areas with
