Killing in the Village Commons Cate Martin,2021-02-09 Winter has come to the lost Norse village of Villmark the wind and snow separating cozy house from cozy house like a knife breaks apart shortbread And for the first time in her life Ingrid Torfa lives alone No mother no grandmother no roommate Just a big empty house and a cat who loves to disappear Magical studies fill her every waking hour and yet those hours stretch out in unbroken silence Until a scream rents the night drawing every neighbor out into the cold streets A woman lies dead at the bottom of the well It looks like an accident to the villagers but to Ingrid it feels like a murder Luckily Ingrid knows just the friends to help her solve the mystery Not even the bite of winter can stop them from uncovering the truth

Crime and Policing in Rural and Small-Town America Ralph A. Weisheit,David N. Falcone,L. Edward Wells,2005-09-21 While most researchers see the urban setting as being the only laboratory for studying crime problems throughout the United States Crime and Policing in Rural and Small Town America directly challenges this notion with an authoritative look at crime and the criminal justice system in rural America today The assumption that rural crime is rare and comparable across various communities has led to incompatible theories and irrelevant practices In order to transform this misconception the Third Edition offers a clear outline of the definition of rural and provides a vital argument for why rural and small town crime should be studied more than it is The book also explores the individual nature of issues that emerge in these communities including illegal drug production domestic violence agricultural crimes rural poverty and gangs in addition to the training needs of rural police probation in rural areas and rural jails and prisons Responding to rural crime requires an awareness of its context and how justice is carried out as well as an appreciation of how features vary across rural areas Understanding the relationships among crime geography and culture in the rural setting can reveal useful ideas and implications for crime and justice in communities across the United States

Western Fictions, Black Realities Isabel Soto, Violet Showers Johnson, 2012-06-01 This anthology interrogates two salient concepts in studying the black experience Ushered in with the age of New World encounters modernity emerged as brutal and complex from its very definition to its manifestations Equally challenging is blackness which is forever dangling between the range of uplifting articulations and insidious degradation The essays in Western Fictions address the conflicting confluences of these two terms Questioning Eurocentric and mainstream American interpretations they reveal the diverse meanings of modernities and blackness from a wide range of milieus of the black experience Interdisciplinary and wide ranging in thematic and epochal scope they use theoretical and empirical studies of a range of subjects to demonstrate that indeed blackness is relevant for understanding modernities and vice versa

Murder Stories Paul Kaplan, 2012-01-16 Murder Stories engages with the current theoretical debate in death penalty research on the role of cultural commitments to American ideologies in the retention of capital punishment The central aim of the study is to illuminate the elusive yet powerful role of ideology in legal discourses Through analyzing the content and processes of death penalty narratives this research illuminates the covert life of the American Creed a nexus of ideologies liberty egalitarianism individualism populism and laissez faire said to be unique to the United States in the law Murder Stories draws on the entire record of California death sentence resulting trials from three large and diverse California counties for the years 1996 2004 as well as interviews with 26 capital caseworkers attorneys judges and investigators from the same counties Employing the theoretical framework proposed by Ewick and Silbey 1995 to study hegemonic and subversive narratives and also the ethnographic approach advocated by Amsterdam and Hertz 1992 to study the producers and processes of constructing legal narratives this book traces the ideological content carried within the stories told by everyday practitioners of capital punishment by investigating the content process and ideological implications of these narratives The central theoretical finding is that the narratives constructed by both prosecutors and defenders tend to instantiate rather than subvert the ideological tenets of the American Creed Encyclopedia of Television Film
