How is chocolate made?

Have you ever wondered where chocolate comes from? Well, chocolate is made from beans which grow in pods on the Theobroma cacao tree. These trees grow in several different countries and the flavour of the beans varies depending on where they come from. The beans also vary in flavour, depending on the age of the tree.

After the beans have been collected and dried, they are transported to chocolate factories. There, the beans are weighed and separated by type so that the manufacturer knows exactly what kind of cacao is going into the chocolate. This ensures the flavour of the chocolate is consistent over time. Some manufacturers use up to twelve types of cacao, depending on the flavour of chocolate they want to create.

Once weighed, the cacao beans are roasted in large ovens for up to two hours. The heat not only dries and darkens the beans but also brings out their flavour. Next, the cacao beans are cracked, and then winnowed – that is, the broken shells are blown away, which leaves the crushed pieces of cacao beans, called 'nibs'. These are edible but do not taste very pleasant. The cacao nibs are then crushed and ground into a thick paste called chocolate liquor. This is bitter and not very smooth or creamy. To improve the flavour, the manufacturer mixes in things like sugar, vanilla and milk.

You could eat this mixture, and it would taste pretty good, but it wouldn't quite have the right texture. So the manufacturer runs the mixture through steel

Self-Regulation and Early School Success Megan M. McClelland, Shauna L. Tominey, 2016-04-08 Self regulation has been identified as an important predictor of school readiness and academic achievement in young children Children who struggle with self regulation are at risk of experiencing peer rejection and academic difficulties Teachers report that there is high variability in children's self regulatory abilities at school entry and that children with an accumulation of risk factors are especially likely to enter school without adequate self regulation skills Moreover early academic skills are often cumulative so children who fail to acquire early skills are at risk of falling behind their peers academically and facing achievement gaps that widen over time Although the relation between self regulation and school related outcomes has been clearly documented our understanding of the pathways through which self regulation influences early achievement and school success remains unclear This special issue considers previously neglected areas in the current understanding of self regulation The seven articles focus on issues including a the complex relations between self regulation and school readiness b predictors of self regulation and academic achievement and c advances in measurement of self regulation and related skills Research that continues to investigate the complex relations and mechanisms that influence early self regulation and related outcomes will inform policy and practice in ways that help all children develop the self regulation skills they need The volume will be of interest to researchers in the field of child development or education and educators and policy makers who are interested in promoting school readiness and academic success This book was originally published as a special issue of Early Education and Development Tests in Print VI

Contemporary Perspectives on Language and Cultural Diversity in Early Childhood Education Olivia Saracho, Bernard Spodek, 2010-04-01. The purpose of the book series is to present reviews of current research in specific areas of early childhood education. Each volume is devoted to a particular area of the field. Within each volume, scholars present reviews of research on particular aspects of the field of early childhood education. Each chapter summarizes the current research and provides an extended set of references which will facilitate readers in furthering their inquiries into research in that area. All contributions to each volume are juried with an Editorial Board and additional scholars reviewing the draft chapters, suggesting ways that the chapters could be improved, and finally recommending them for publication. This process insures the quality of the contributions to the chapter and avoids the possibility of bias in the work. Recent findings suggest that young children's learning experiences are critical to their learning development, which has attracted the attention of researchers, scholars, and policy makers. Interest has focused on the early childhood policy and practice that can help improve the academic paths of children in poverty. Many of these children are from linguistically and culturally diverse families. The purpose of this volume is to review and summarize the current state of knowledge related to linguistically and
