Evaluating Critical Care Using Health Services Research To Improve Quality:

Evaluating Critical Care William J. Sibbald, Julian F. Bion, 2012-12-06 Measuring the quality of a complex service like critical care that combines the highest technology with the most intimate caring is a challenge Recently consumers clinicians and payers have requested more formal assessments and comparisons of the quality and costs of medical care 2 Donabedian 1 proposed a framework for thinking about the quality of medical care that separates quality into three components structure process and outcome An instructive analogy for understanding this framework is to imagine a food critic evaluating the quality of a restaurant The critic might comment on the decoration and lighting of the restaurant how close the tables are to each other the extent of the wine list and where the chef trained These are all evaluations of the restaurant structure In addition the critic might comment on whether the service was courteous and timely measures of process Finally the critic might comment on outcomes like customer satisfaction or food poisoning Similarly to a health care critic structure is the physical and human resources used to deliver medical care Processes are the actual treatments offered to patients Finally outcomes are what happens to patients for example mortality quality of life and satisfaction with care Table 1 There is a debate about which of these measurements is the most important measure of quality Encyclopedia of Health Services Research Ross M. Mullner, 2009-05-15 Today as never before healthcare has the ability to enhance the quality and duration of life At the same time healthcare has become so costly that it can easily bankrupt governments and impoverish individuals and families Health services research is a highly multidisciplinary field including such areas as health administration health economics medical sociology medicine political science public health and public policy The Encyclopedia of Health Services Research is the first single reference source to capture the diversity and complexity of the field With more than 400 entries these two volumes investigate the relationship between the factors of cost quality and access to healthcare and their impact upon medical outcomes such as death disability disease discomfort and dissatisfaction with care Key Features Examines the growing healthcare crisis facing the United States Encompasses the structure process and outcomes of healthcare Aims to improve the equity efficiency effectiveness and safety of healthcare by influencing and developing public policies Describes healthcare systems and issues from around the globe Key Themes Access to Care Accreditation Associations Foundations and Research Organizations Biographies of Current and Past Leaders Cost of Care Economics Finance and Payment Mechanisms Disease Disability Health and Health Behavior Government and International Healthcare Organizations Health Insurance Health Professionals and Healthcare Organizations Health Services Research Laws Regulations and Ethics Measurement Data Sources and Coding and Research Methods Outcomes of Care Policy Issues Healthcare Reform and International Comparisons Public Health Quality and Safety of Care Special and Vulnerable Groups The Encyclopedia is designed to be an introduction to the various topics of health services research for an audience including undergraduate students graduate students and general readers seeking non technical descriptions of the field and its practices It is also useful for healthcare practitioners wishing to stay abreast of the changes and updates in the field

Kliemt,F. Thiele,2013-03-09 The book series on the ethics of science and technology assessment edited by the Europ ische Akademie is devoted to the publication of the work reports of its project groups works on the foundations of ethics the philosophy science and other issues related to the work of the Europ ische Akademie In addition the series comprises the proceedings of conferences organized by the academy The 13th volume documents the proceeding of the academy s spring symposium in 2000 on Rationing in Medicine which was held in Bad Neuenahr Ahrweiler on March 23 25 2000 An intense discussion on the future of health care in Europe has been stimulated by increasing difficulties of securing adequate and needs orientated medical care in the face of scarce resources and medical progress Un fortunately quite of ten a rational discussion of rationing is drowned out by the politic al talk of the day But only an open and well informed debate if anything at ali can lead to transparent and just rationing procedures which eventually might be acceptable to the public at large For this debate much can be learnt from observing the experiences other countries have made with their health care arrangements What kinds of mistakes should be avoided and what might be useful in the different states and perhaps also in the supra national context of an emerging Europe are interesting and important issues Intensive Care Medicine in 10

Evans,Mitchell P. Fink,2002-01-21 The pathophysiology of sepsis can be regarded as a series of steps beginning with the invasion of normally sterile tissue by microbes and the elaboration of various pro inflammatory mediators The final common pathway is often the development of the multiple organ dysfunction syndrome MODS Whereas a great deal has been learned during the past quarter century about the inflammatory processes associated with sepsis and other related conditions such as ischemia reperfusion injury our understanding is far less developed with respect to the pathophysiological events that lead to organ dysfunction under these conditions Nevertheless efforts by both clinical and laboratory scientists are leading to new knowledge in this area The chapters in this volume provide a state of the art overview of many aspects of the pathophysiology of organ dysfunction in critical illness From Nutrition Support to Pharmacologic Nutrition in the ICU Claude
