Kesselring, Matthew Neufeld, 2024-09-03 Bringing together essays on uses of history as both a practical activity and an approach to thinking about the present this collection explores ways in which people have reckoned with history in pasts both distant and near Reckoning with History begins by examining uses of the past in early modern Britain a period in which print religious reformation and political conflict transformed historical culture Later essays offer insights into personal popular professional and sometimes deeply political uses of the past in other times and places helping to contextualize our own moments in historical writing and to link the early and post modern periods Throughout contributors respond to the writings of Daniel Woolf whose scholarship illuminates the history of the historical discipline and the social circulation of the past Covering subjects such as early archival practices memories of historic plagues and the type of commemorations needed to revitalize liberal democracies Reckoning with History contextualizes the uses of the past today The Medieval Chronicle II , 2021-11-22 After the success of the first international conference on the medieval chronicle it was decided that another would be in place It was held in the summer of 1999 and again drew some 150 participants There are several reasons why the chronicle is particularly suited as the topic of an international conference In the first place there is its ubiquity all over Europe and throughout the Middle Ages chronicles were written both in Latin and in the vernacular and not only in Europe but also in the countries neighbouring on it like those of the Arabic world Secondly all chronicles raise such questions as by whom for whom or for what purpose were they written how do they reconstruct the past what determined the choice of verse or prose or what kind of literary influences are discernable in them Finally many chronicles have been beautifully illuminated and the relation between text and image leads to a wholly different set of questions Like its predecessor this volume of conference papers aims to provide a representative survey of the on going research in the field of chronicle studies illustrated by examples from specific chronicles from a wide variety of countries periods and cultural backgrounds They are introduced by the opening address by David Dumville on the question What is a chronicle

Literacy and Identity in Early

Medieval Ireland Elva Johnston, 2013-08-15 Much of our knowledge of early medieval Ireland comes from a rich literature written in a variety of genres and in two languages Irish and Latin Who wrote this literature and what role did they play within society What did the introduction and expansion of literacy mean in a culture where the vast majority of the population continued to be non literate How did literacy operate in and intersect with the oral world Was literacy a key element in the formation and articulation of communal and elite senses of identity This book addresses these issues in the first full interdisciplinary examination of the Irish literate elite and their social contexts between ca 400 1000 AD It considers the role played by Hiberno Latin authors the expansion of vernacular literacy and the key place of monasteries within the literate landscape Also examined are the crucial intersections between literacy and orality which underpin the importance played by the literate elite in giving voice to aristocratic and communal identities Old English Chronicles John Allen Giles, 1901

Illustrating the Past in Early Modern England James A. Knapp, 2017-07-28 Illustrating the Past is a study of the status of visual and verbal media in early modern English representations of the past It focuses on general attitudes towards visual and verbal representations of history as well as specific illustrated books produced during the period Through a close examination of the relationship of image to text in light of contemporary discussions of poetic and aesthetic practice the book demonstrates that the struggle between the image and the word played a profoundly important role in England's emergent historical self awareness The opposition between history and story fact and fiction often tenuous provided a sounding board for deeper conflicts over the form in which representations might best yield truth from history The ensuing schism between poets and historians over the proper venue for the lessons of the past manifested itself on the pages of early modern printed books The discussion focuses on the word and image relationships in several important illustrated books printed during the second half of the sixteenth century including Holinshed's Chronicles 1577 and Foxe's Book of Martyrs 1563 1570 in the context of contemporary works on history and poetics such as Sir Philip Sidney's Apology for Poetry and Thomas Blundeville's The true order and Method of wryting and reading Hystories Illustrating the Past specifically answers two important questions concerning the resultant production of literary and historical texts in the period Why did the use of images in printed histories suddenly become unpopular at the end of the sixteenth century and What impact did this publishing trend have on writers of literary and historical texts Calvinism, Reform and the Absolutist State in Elizabethan Ireland Mark A Hutchinson, 2015-10-06 Despite the best efforts of the English government Elizabethan Ireland remained resolutely Catholic Hutchinson examines this failure of the Protestant Reformation He argues that the emerging political concept of the absolutist state forms a crucial link between English policy in Ireland and the aims of the Calvinist reformers The Medieval Chronicle III, 2021-11-22 In the summer of 2002 the third international conference on the medieval chronicle was held again in the vicinity of Utrecht the Netherlands There are several reasons why the chronicle is particularly suited as the topic of an international conference In the first place there is its ubiquity all over Europe and throughout the Middle Ages chronicles were written both in Latin and in the vernacular and not only in Europe but also in the countries neighbouring on it like those of the Arabic world Secondly all chronicles raise such questions as by whom for whom or for what purpose were they written how do they reconstruct the past what determined the choice of verse or prose or what kind of literary influences are discernable in them Finally many chronicles have been beautifully illuminated and the relation between text and image leads to a wholly different set of questions This third volume of conference papers again aims to provide a representative survey of the on going research in the field of chronicle studies illustrated by examples from specific chronicles from a wide variety of countries periods and cultural backgrounds
