

How to improve your paragraphs

Within each paragraph that you write you should try to use time connectives (words that connect events and show time) such as 'then', 'after', 'before'.

If you use these time connectives that mean something happened immediately after the last event then you don't need to start a new paragraph!

However, you should try not to make paragraphs too long and when writing should separate some events (like we did above by saying 'later on').
