Ernest Chausson Jean-Pierre Barricelli, Leo Weinstein, 1955 This is the biography of a significant figure in modern music and also the first comprehensive study of the French composer's life and works some of which the Poeme concert and symphony have become standard symphonic repertoire while others art songs such as Le Temps des Lilas and Le Colibri are now as well known as those of Schubert Grieg and Debussy Born at the collapse of Wagnerian romanticism from which he nevertheless inherited a strong lyrical predilection Chausson became a student of Massenet and then of le pere Franck although Chausson's own individuality and original musical idiom did eventually emerge after a painful struggle with himself purged of any strong traditional influence This book reveals also the full story of this much neglected Franck group which began a renaissance in French music but which has heretofore occupied that musician's limbo inhabited by those who did not produce prodigiously or introduce a new ism The book furnishes too a glittering glimpse of a nineteenth century cultural salon at its height for the generous wealthy Chaussons entertained regularly such figures as Colette and her husband Willy Gauthier Villars Manet Renoir Degas and Mallarme before whom musicians such as Bizet Ysaye Faure and Debussy often previewed their latest works The reciprocal influence and affection existing between Chausson and Debussy is seen from the inclusion here of many of their intimate letters a high point of the book This account of Chausson's life presented on the hundredth anniversary of his birth provides and invaluable aid in the understanding of his music fully analyzed separately It also gives a close up view of many of those artists responsible for making their era one of the most far reaching and exciting in French intellectual history
