Innovations In Teaching Abstract Algebra Maa Notes 60:

Abstract Algebra Stephen Lovett, 2022-07-05 When a student of mathematics studies abstract algebra he or she inevitably faces questions in the vein of What is abstract algebra or What makes it abstract Algebra in its broadest sense describes a way of thinking about classes of sets equipped with binary operations In high school algebra a student explores properties of operations and on real numbers Abstract algebra studies properties of operations without specifying what types of number or object we work with Any theorem established in the abstract context holds not only for real numbers but for every possible algebraic structure that has operations with the stated properties This textbook intends to serve as a first course in abstract algebra The selection of topics serves both of the common trends in such a course a balanced introduction to groups rings and fields or a course that primarily emphasizes group theory The writing style is student centered conscientiously motivating definitions and offering many illustrative examples Various sections or sometimes just examples or exercises introduce applications to geometry number theory cryptography and many other areas This book offers a unique feature in the lists of projects at the end of each section the author does not view projects as just something extra or cute but rather an opportunity for a student to work on and demonstrate their potential for open ended investigation The projects ideas come in two flavors investigative or expository The investigative projects briefly present a topic and posed open ended questions that invite the student to explore the topic asking and to trying to answer their own questions Expository projects invite the student to explore a topic with algebraic content or pertain to a particular mathematician s work through responsible research The exercises challenge the student to prove new results using the theorems presented in the text The student then becomes an active participant in the development of the field MAA Notes ,1983 Resources for Teaching Discrete Mathematics Brian Hopkins, 2009 Hopkins collects the work of 35 instructors who share their innovations and insights about teaching discrete mathematics at the high school and college level The book s 9 classroom tested projects including building a geodesic dome come with student handouts solutions and notes for the instructor The 11 history modules presented draw on original sources such as Pascal s Treatise on the Arithmetical Triangle allowing students to explore topics in their original contexts Three articles address extensions of standard discrete mathematics content Two other articles explore pedagogy specifically related to discrete mathematics courses adapting a group discovery method to larger classes and using logic in encouraging students to construct proofs Innovations in Teaching Abstract Algebra Allen C. This book confronts the issue of how young people can find a way into the world of algebra It represents multiple perspectives which include an analysis of situations in which algebra is an efficient problem solving tool the use of computer based technologies and a consideration of the historical evolution of algebra The book emphasizes the situated nature of algebraic activity as opposed to being concerned with identifying students conceptions in isolation from problem solving activity Teaching Early Algebra through Example-Based Problem Solving Meixia Ding,2021-04-08 Drawing on rich classroom observations of educators teaching in China and the U S this book details an innovative and effective approach to teaching algebra at the elementary level namely teaching through example based problem solving TEPS Recognizing young children s particular cognitive and developmental capabilities this book powerfully argues for the importance of infusing algebraic thinking into early grade mathematics teaching and illustrates how this has been achieved by teachers in U S and Chinese contexts Documenting best practice and students responses to example based instruction the text demonstrates that this TEPS approach which involves the use of worked examples representations and deep questions helps students learn and master fundamental mathematical ideas making it highly effective in developing algebraic readiness and mathematical understanding This text will benefit post graduate students researchers and academics in the fields of mathematics STEM and elementary education as well as algebra research more broadly Those interested in teacher education classroom practice and developmental and cognitive psychology will also find this volume of interest Research agenda for mathematics education Sigrid Wagner, The Learning and Teaching of Algebra Abraham Arcavi,Paul Drijvers,Kaye Stacey,2016-06-23

understanding in teacher candidates Research suggests teachers need more than just a basic knowledge of the math they teach They need mathematical knowledge for teaching MKT the ability to unpack mathematical ideas to interpret student errors and to flexibly use multiple representations of a single concept Ball Thames Phelps 2008 Teachers must also be able to engage in mathematical practices which are the tools needed to do mathematics Though future teachers may gain general math knowledge through college courses advanced college mathematics looks very different from the math taught in high school creating a vertical disconnect Cuoco 2001 p 3 To address this disconnect math educators have called for the design of math courses for future teachers In this study I investigate future secondary teacher development of MKT in a math class designed for teachers I conducted a case study of an abstract algebra course designed specifically for pre service teachers Abstract algebra is a ubiquitous requirement for math majors and often feels very disconnected from school mathematics The case study provided insight into the opportunities to learn available in the content course I investigated participants learning through interviews and surveys that explored MKT and engagement in mathematical practices I also collected data on pre service teacher learning at a comparison site that did not offer math content courses for teachers Collecting data from two sites afforded considering a wider range of teacher learning My dissertation focuses on three key themes In Article I I focus on the opportunities to learn in the abstract algebra course designed for teachers Through a novel course design participants had opportunities to learn mathematical content secondary and tertiary mathematical practices and pedagogical techniques In Article II I explore participant learning around engaging in mathematical practices I found participants had different learning trajectories and all improved their ability to engage in justification on a school level algebra task The growth was related to the opportunities to learn in the class indicating participants were able to apply practices from abstract algebra to high school content In Article III I explore challenges in conceptualizing and measuring secondary MKT across participants at both sites Performance on the survey measure revealed a ceiling effect which illuminated the challenge of developing a secondary MKT measure with appropriate levels of difficulty Among participants who performed similarly on the survey task based think aloud interviews revealed differences in engagement in mathematical practices This suggests that survey measures may insufficiently capture practice engagement This study has key implications for teacher preparation and research The opportunities to learn in the abstract algebra class around math content practices and pedagogy suggests the value of tailoring math content courses to meet the needs of pre service teachers Notably participants were able to apply their learning about practices to high school level content In light of the emphasis on mathematical practices in the Common Core Standards teachers must be able to engage in practices themselves and be able to teach their students to do the same Accordingly it is critical to better incorporate a perspective on engagement in mathematical practices into the conceptualization of secondary mathematical knowledge for teaching
