Radcliffe, 1979 Easy to use competently indexed and fun to explore this bibliography is an irresistible antidote for all forms of gothic snobbery Recommended for gothophiliacs gothophobiacs and readers with idle nights and empty weekends Everybody's Magazine , 1928

Everybody's , 1928 Conceiving People Daniel Groll, 2021-08-24 This is an open access title available under the terms of a CC BY NC ND 4.0 International license It is free to read at Oxford Scholarship Online and offered as a free PDF download from OUP and selected open access locations Each year tens of thousands of children are conceived with donated gametes sperm or eggs By some estimates there are over one million donor conceived people in the United States and of course many more the world over Some know they are donor conceived Some do not Some know the identity of their donors Others never will Questions about what donor conceived people should know about their genetic progenitors are hugely significant for literally millions of people including donor conceived people their parents and donors But the practice of gamete donation also provides a vivid occasion for thinking about questions that matter to everyone What is the value of knowing who your genetic progenitors are How are our identities bound up with knowing where we come from What obligations do parents have to their children And what makes someone a parent in the first place In Conceiving People Identity Genetics and Gamete Donation Daniel Groll argues that people who plan to create a child with donated gametes should choose a donor whose identity will be made available to the resulting child This is not Groll argues because having genetic knowledge is fundamentally important Rather it is because donor conceived people are likely to develop a significant interest in having genetic knowledge and parents must help satisfy their children's significant interests In other words because a donor conceived person is likely to care about having genetic knowledge their parents should care too
