INHERITANCE IN POULTRY Charles Benedict 1866-1944 Davenport, 2016-08-27 This work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it. This work was reproduced from the original artifact and remains as true to the original work as possible. Therefore you will see the original copyright references, library stamps as most of these works have been housed in our most important libraries around the world and other notations in the work. This work is in the public domain in the United States of America and possibly other nations. Within the United States you may freely copy and distribute this work as no entity individual or corporate has a copyright on the body of the work. As a reproduction of a historical artifact, this work may contain missing or blurred pages, poor pictures, errant marks, etc. Scholars believe, and we concur, that this work is important enough to be preserved, reproduced, and made generally available to the public. We appreciate your support of the preservation process and thank you for being an important part of keeping this knowledge alive and relevant.

We have not used OCR (Optical Character Recognition) as this leads to bad quality books with introduced typos. 2. In books where there are images such as portraits, maps, sketches, etc., we have endeavoured to keep the quality of these images so they represent accurately the original artefact. Although occasionally there may be certain imperfections with these old texts, we feel they deserve to be made available for future generations to enjoy.      Inheritance in Poultry (Classic Reprint) C. B. Davenport, 2017-12-26 Excerpt from Inheritance in Poultry Lucas 1850 p. 194 recognizes three methods of inheritance which he calls respectively that of election, of mixture, and of combination. They are thus defined: Election results in imprinting on some or all parts of the organism the characteristics of the father exclusively or those of the mother. Mixture results in a mixed or simultaneous representation of the father and of the mother on some or all of the parts of the organism. Its extreme is fusion of characteristics. Combination results in the substitution of a new characteristic in the place of any representative in a part or over the whole of the organism. This new characteristic results from the interaction of the two antagonistic ones, just as a chemical combination often differs wholly from the elements which have been united in its manufacture. Darwin 1876 Chapter XV seems to recognize only two classes of inheritance: Viz. one in which characteristics blend, and one in which they refuse to blend. Of the latter class, however, there are two cases: either the hybrid receives all its characters from one of its parents only, or the hybrid receives part of its characters from one parent, the rest from the other.
