Issues in History Teaching James Arthur, Robert Phillips, 2002

Understanding History Teaching Chris Husbands, Alison Kitson, Anna Pendry, 2003-09-16 Understanding History Teaching is an enjoyable read with a logical and flowing structure It lives up to its goal of appealing to both academic and professional readers with both academic depth and real insights and opportunities for the professional teacher to draw from It presents its data and interpretations in a manner which does not avoid the issues revealed within the research but has an uplifting effect on the reader and leaves them feeling optimistic about the quality of History teaching in UK secondary schools

Robert Wyness Student De Montfort University Leicester UK Why do we teach and learn about the past How is history taught in schools What are the influences on the way teachers teach and pupils learn about the past History is one of the most ideologically disputed of school subjects Over the past generation the subject has experienced fundamental changes in content pedagogy and approach This book is the first detailed account of the way history is taught in schools to be published for 30 years Drawing on fieldwork in comprehensive schools and on research studies worldwide the authors pose fundamental questions about the way teachers teach and learners learn They consider its purposes on teaching about the past in a world of accelerating change The book sets out to explore the realities of classroom history teaching and to offer pointers for the development on the subject in a new century

Teaching and Learning in History Ola Hallden, 2012-10-12 Research on history instruction and learning is emerging as an exciting new field of inquiry The editors prepared this volume because the field is at an important moment in its development a stage where there is

research of sufficient depth and breadth to warrant a collection of representative pieces The field of research on history teaching and learning connects with both traditional research on social studies and with recent cognitive analyses of domains such as mathematics and physics However the newer research goes beyond these activities as well Where traditional research approaches to social studies instruction and learning have focused on curriculum they have avoided the study of purely disciplinary features the textual components of history and the concomitant demands as well as the nature of various learners Where recent cognitive analyses of mathematics and physics have dealt with misconceptions and knowledge construction they have avoided topics such as perspective taking interpretation and rhetorical layerings The new work by contrast has been concerned with these issues as well as the careful analyses of the nature of historical tasks and the nature of disciplinary and instructional explanations The lines of research presented in these chapters are both compelling and diverse and include a range of topical questions such as What affects the quality of teaching How are historical documents interpreted in the writing of history How is history explained What are the classroom demands on an elementary school social studies teacher What does text accomplish or fail to accomplish in educational settings How do teachers think about particular topics for history teaching Although much of the research reflects a grounding in or the influence of cognitive psychology not all of it derives from that tradition Traditions of rhetoric curriculum analysis and developmental psychology are also woven throughout the chapters The editors envision this volume as a contribution to educational research in a subject matter and as a tool for practitioners concerned with the improvement of instruction in history They also anticipate that it will contribute to cognitive science
