Machine Ethics and Robot Ethics Wendell Wallach, Peter Asaro, 2020-09-10 Once the stuff of science fiction recent progress in artificial intelligence robotics and machine learning means that these rapidly advancing technologies are finally coming into widespread use within everyday life Such rapid development in these areas also brings with it a host of social political and legal issues as well as a rise in public concern and academic interest in the ethical challenges these new technologies pose This volume is a collection of scholarly work from leading figures in the development of both robot ethics and machine ethics it includes essays of historical significance which have become foundational for research in these two new areas of study as well as important recent articles The research articles selected focus on the control and governance of computational systems the exploration of ethical and moral theories using software and robots as laboratories or simulations inquiry into the necessary requirements for moral agency and the basis and boundaries of rights and questions of how best to design systems that are both useful and morally sound Collectively the articles ask what the practical ethical and legal issues arising from the development of robots will be over the next twenty years and how best to address these future considerations

Considering Counter-Narratives Michael Bamberg, Molly Andrews, 2004-11-30 Counter narratives only make sense in relation to something else that which they are countering The very name identifies it as a positional category in tension with another category But what is dominant and what is resistant are not of course static questions but rather are forever shifting placements The discussion of counter narratives is ultimately a consideration of multiple layers of positioning The fluidity of these relational categories is what lies at the center of the chapters and commentaries collected in this book The book

comprises six target chapters by leading scholars in the field Twenty two commentators discuss these chapters from a number of diverse vantage points followed by responses from the six original authors A final chapter by the editor of the book series concludes the book

Talking to Adults Shoshana Blum-Kulka, Catherine E. Snow, 2002-04-01 This volume provides a comprehensive and in depth analysis of the contribution of multiparty intergenerational talk in a variety of cultures to the development of children s communicative capacities The book focuses on the complexity of the cultural and interactional contexts in which pragmatic learning occurs and re examines certain assumptions implicit in research on language socialization to date such as primacy of dyadic interactions in the early ages and the presupposition of a monolingual social matrix One of the aims of the book is to demonstrate the degree of cultural diversity in paths of pragmatic development Individual chapters present empirically grounded analyses of talk with children of all ages in different participation structures and in a variety of cultures In pursuing this theme the volume is meant to further enrich cross cultural perspectives on language socialization by providing in each of its chapters an empirically grounded analysis of the development of one specific dimension of discursive skill The nine invited chapters comprise new empirical work on the development of specific discourse dimensions Authors have been asked also to adopt a reflexive stand on their line of research and to incorporate in the chapter a comprehensive and critical perspective on former work on the discursive dimension investigated The discourse dimensions represented in the volume include narratives explanations the language of control in intergenerational and intragenerational talk the language of humor and affect and bilingual conversations The volume offers a rich spectrum of cultural variety in pragmatic development including studies of American Greek Japanese Mayan Norwegian and Swedish children and families
