Advances in Archaeological Method and Theory, 2014-06-28 Advances in Archaeological Method and Theory

Archaeological Theory Today Ian Hodder, 2014-02-27 Now in a revised and updated second edition this volume provides an authoritative account of the current status of archaeological theory as presented by some of its major exponents and innovators over recent decades It summarizes the latest developments in the field and looks to its future exploring some of the cutting edge ideas at the forefront of the discipline The volume captures the diversity of contemporary archaeological theory Some authors argue for an approach close to the natural sciences others for an engagement with cultural debate about representation of the past Some minimize the relevance of culture to societal change while others see it as central some focus on the contingent and the local others on long term evolution While few practitioners in theoretical archaeology would today argue for a unified disciplinary approach the authors in this volume increasingly see links and convergences between their perspectives The volume also reflects archaeology's new openness to external influences as well as the desire to contribute to wider debates The contributors examine ways in which archaeological evidence contributes to theories of evolutionary psychology as well as to the social sciences in general where theories of social relationships agency landscape and identity are informed by the long term perspective of archaeology The new edition of Archaeological Theory Today will continue to be essential reading for students and scholars in archaeology and in the social sciences more generally

Advances in Archaeological Method and Theory Michael B Schiffer, 2014-06-30 Advances in Archaeological Method and Theory Volume 4 presents the progressive explorations in methods and theory in archaeology This book discusses the increasing application of surface collection in cultural resource management Organized into eight chapters this volume begins with an overview of the fundamental aspects of archaeoastronomy and explains what kinds of testable hypotheses that archaeoastronomy generates This text then examines the general implications for the study of cultural complexity Other chapters consider the use of surface artifacts by archaeologists to locate sites establish regional culture histories and to know where to excavate within sites This book discusses as well the interpretative interfaces between archaeology on the one hand and ethnohistory and ethnology on the other that is based on a theoretical stance advocating a fundamental holistic approach to anthropology The final chapter deals with understanding the ecology of ancient organisms This book is a valuable resource for archaeologists and anthropologists

Theory and Practice in Archaeology Ian Hodder, 2004-08-02 An overview of the way the archaeological debate has developed over the last 10 years Hodder aims to break down the separation between theory and practice and reconcile the division between the intellectual and the dirt archaeologist Shamanism and the Ancient Mind James L. Pearson, 2002 A study of archaeological evidence for Shamanism in North America and how it links to the archaeology of the mind Visit our website for sample chapters The Origins of Early Christian Ireland Harold Mytum, 2024-11-18 The cultural developments of Early Christian Ireland have long been recognised and described There have however been few attempts to date to explain why the flowering of culture should happen at the time and in the way that it did First published in 1992 The Origins of Early Christian Ireland now with a new preface by the author explains changes in the period up to AD 800 in Ireland External stimuli most notably from Irish settlers in western Britain acted as catalysts which transformed a relatively moribund Iron Age culture into one of extraordinary vigour All aspects of the culture changed radically and changes in each had knock on effects on others Beliefs were revolutionised by Christianity society was transformed by the church as an institution and the rise of the individual agriculture was expanded by more advanced technology and the entrepreneurial flair of individual decision making craft production became more widespread and offered a vehicle for the display of personal wealth and status Long distance trade and ecclesiastical contacts integrated Ireland with the rest of Europe more effectively than ever before The book has two distinctive features which means that it relates to two forms of academic market each of which can be defined Firstly it deals with a particular culture historical period that of Early Christian Ireland and presents an explanation of its origins and development to AD 800 This appeals to archaeologists and historians of Ireland Britain and indeed Europe Secondly it takes a specific theoretical position and develops it using primarily archaeological but also extensive historical information This is the most detailed application of processualist theory yet undertaken for a historic period in Europe This appeals to archaeologists and anthropologists in Britain and also North America where the processualist approach is the most popular theoretical position Meaning Change in Grammaticalization Regine Eckardt, 2006-07-27 The author explores the mechanisms underlying semantic change Meaning changes work and this is evident in processes of grammaticalisation in which lexical items lose autonomous meaning Based on formal semantic theory this book is useful for students of historical and comparative linguistics and formal semantics

Craft Production and Social Change in Northern China Anne P. Underhill, 2012-12-06 This book offers an anthropological analysis of how craft production changed in relation to the development of complex societies in northern China It focuses on the production and use of food containers pottery and bronze vessels during the late prehistoric and early historic periods A major theme is how production and use of prestige vessels changed in relation to increase in degree of social inequality The research and writing of this book took place intermittently over a period of several years When I first outlined the book in 1994 I planned to offer a more limited and descriptive account of social change during the late prehistoric period In considering the human desire to display status with prestige goods my initial approach emphasized how the case of northern China was similar to other areas of the world I began to realize that in order to adequately explain how and why craft production changed in ancient China it was crucial to consider the belief systems that motivated production and use of food containers Similarly a striking characteristic of ancient China that I needed to include in the analysis was the preponderance of food containers rather than other goods that were buried with the deceased I decided to investigate the social and ritual uses of food beverages and containers during more than one period of Chinese history Some strong patterns could have emerged during the late prehistoric period

Archaeology and its Discontents John C. Barrett, 2021-03-30 Archaeology and its Discontents examines the state of archaeology today and its development throughout the twentieth century making a powerful case for new approaches Surveying the themes of twentieth century archaeological theory Barrett looks at their successes limitations and failures Seeing more failures and limitations than successes he argues that archaeology has over focused on explaining the human construction of material variability and should instead be more concerned with understanding how human diversity has been constructed Archaeology matters he argues precisely because of the insights it can offer into the development of human diversity The analysis and argument are illustrated throughout by reference to the development of the European Neolithic Arguing both for new approaches and for the importance of archaeology as a discipline Archaeology and its Discontents is for
