Dick, 2009 As the National Aeronautics and Space Administration NASA celebrated its 50th anniversary in 2008 historians as well as scientists and engineers could look back on a record of accomplishment Much has been written about the evolution of NASA s multifaceted programs and the people who carried them out Yet much remains to be done and we hope this publication will facilitate research in this important field Page 1      Rockets and People: The moon race Boris Evseevich Chertok, 2005      Exploring the Unknown:

Logsdon,Roger D. Launius,David H. Onkst,Stephen J. Garber,2014-02-02 One of the most important developments of the twentieth century has been the movement of humanity into space with machines and people The underpinnings of that movement why it took the shape it did which individuals and organizations were involved what factors drove a particular choice of scientific objectives and technologies to be used and the political economic managerial and international contexts in which the events of the space age unfolded are all important ingredients of this epoch transition from an Earthbound to a spacefaring people This desire to understand the development of spaceflight in the United States sparked this documentary history series The extension of human activity into outer space has been accompanied by a high degree of self awareness of its historical significance Few large scale activities have been as extensively chronicled so closely to the time they actually occurred Many of those who were directly involved were quite conscious that they were making history and they kept full records of their activities Because most of the activity in outer space was carried out under government sponsorship it was accompanied by the documentary record required of public institutions and there has been a spate of official and privately written histories of most major aspects of space achievement to date When top leaders considered what course of action to pursue in space their deliberations and decisions often were carefully put on the record There is accordingly no lack of material for those who aspire to understand the origins and evolution of U S space policies and programs This reality forms the rationale for this series Precisely because there is so much historical material available on space matters the National Aeronautics and Space Administration NASA decided in 1988 that it would be extremely useful to have a selective collection of many of the seminal documents related to the evolution of the U S civilian space program that was easily available to scholars and the interested public While recognizing that much space activity has taken place under the sponsorship of the Department of Defense and other national security organizations the U S private sector and other countries around the world NASA felt that there would be lasting value in a collection of documentary material primarily focused on the evolution of the U S government s civilian space program most of which has been carried out under the agency s auspices since 1958 As a result the NASA History Office contracted with the Space Policy Institute of George Washington University s Elliott School of International Affairs to prepare such a collection This is the third volume in the documentary history series three additional ones detailing programmatic developments with respect to space transportation space science and human spaceflight will follow The documents selected for inclusion in this volume are presented in three major chapters each covering a particular aspect of the utilization of space capabilities and the unique characteristics of the space environment These chapters address 1 communicating via satellite 2 observing the Earth from space for practical purposes Earth science will be covered in a later volume and 3 the various ways in which space activities have had economic impacts Volume I in this series covered the antecedents to the U S space program as well as the origins and evolution of U S space policy and of NASA as an organizational institution Volume II addressed the relationship between the civilian space program of the United States and the space activities of other countries the relationship between the U S civilian and national security space and military efforts and NASA s relationship with industry and academic institutions As mentioned above future volumes will cover space transportation space science and human spaceflight Critical issues in the history of spaceflight Steven J. Dick,2018

Critical Issues in the History of Spaceflight Stephen J. Dick,Steven J. Dick,Roger D. Launius,2006 In March 2005 the NASA History Division and the Division of Space History at the National Air and Space Museum brought together a distinguished group of scholars to consider the state of the discipline of space history This volume is a collection of essays based on those deliberations The meeting took place at a time of extraordinary transformation for NASA stemming from the new Vision of Space Exploration announced by President George W Bush in January 2004 to go to the Moon Mars and beyond This Vision in turn stemmed from a deep reevaluation of NASA s goals in the wake of the Space Shuttle Columbia accident and the recommendations of the Columbia Accident Investigation Board The new goals were seen as initiating a New Age of Exploration and were placed in the context of the importance of exploration and discovery to the American experiences Amazon NASA's First A Robert G. Ferguson,2013 Flights of Discovery Lane E. Wallace,2006 Innovation in Flight Joseph R. Chambers,2005 When Biospheres Collide Michael Meltzer,2010 NOTE NO FURTHER DISCOUNT FOR THIS PRINT PRODUCT OVERSTOCK SALE Significantly reduced list price This new book from the NASA History Series tackles an interesting duo of biological problems that will be familiar to anybody who has seen photos of Apollo astronauts quarantined after their return to Earth Namely how do we avoid contaminating celestial bodies with Earthly germs when we send spacecraft to study these bodies and how do we avoid spreading foreign biological matter from space when our robotic and human spacefarers return to Earth Biological matter from an external system could potentially cause an unchecked epidemic either on Earth or in space so strict precautions are necessary Each time a space vehicle visits another world it runs the risk of forever changing that extraterrestrial environment We are surrounded on Earth by a melange of different microorganisms and if some of these hitchhike onboard a space mission they could contaminate and start colonies on a different planet Such an occurrence would irrevocably alter the nature of that world compromise all future scientific exploration of the body and possibly damage any extant life on it By inadvertently carrying exotic organisms back to Earth on our spacecraft we also risk the release of biohazardous materials into our own ecosystem Such concerns were recognized by scientists even before the 1957 launch of Sputnik This book presents the history of planetary protection by tracing the responses to the above concerns on NASA s missions to the Moon Mars Venus Jupiter Saturn and many smaller bodies of our solar system The book relates the extensive efforts put forth by NASA to plan operations and prepare space vehicles that return exemplary science without contaminating the biospheres of other worlds or our own To protect irreplaceable environments NASA has committed to conducting space exploration in a manner that is protective of the bodies visited as well as of our own planet
