Jascha Heifetz ,1937 Autographed photograph Lithuania America Jascha Heifetz February 2 O S January 20 1901 December 10 1987 was a violinist born in Vilnius Lithuania He is widely regarded as arguably the greatest violinist of all time On October 27 1917 Heifetz played for the first time in the United States at Carnegie Hall in New York and became an immediate sensation Fellow violinist Mischa Elman in the audience asked Do you think it s hot in here whereupon the pianist Leopold Godowsky in the next seat imperturbably replied Not for pianists The reviews by the New York critics were rapturous Heifetz s technical command of his instrument his physical ability to play the violin with stunning precision is regarded by many critics as unequalled That physical control enabled Heifetz to produce a distinctive tone quality intense and shimmering that came to be regarded as his trademark Yet from time to time his near perfect technique and conservative stage demeanor caused some critics to accuse him of being overly mechanical even cold Virgil Thomson called Heifetz s style of playing silk underwear music a term he did not intend as a compliment Other critics argue that he infused his playing with feeling and reverence for the composers intentions His style of playing was highly influential in defining the way modern violinists approach the instrument His use of rapid vibrato emotionally charged portamento fast tempos and superb bow control coalesced to create a highly distinctive sound that make Heifetz s playing instantly recognizable to aficionados The violinist Itzhak Perlman who himself is noted for his rich warm tone and expressive use of portamento describes Heifetz s tone as like a tornado because of its emotional intensity Perlman also said that Heifetz preferred to be recorded relatively close to the microphone as a result one would perceive a somewhat different tone quality when listening to Heifetz during a concert hall performance as opposed to a recording In creating his sound Heifetz was very particular about his choice of strings He used a silver wound Tricolore gut G string plain gut unvarnished D and A strings and a Goldbrokat steel E string medium including clear Hill brand rosin sparingly Heifetz believed that playing on gut strings was important in rendering an individual sound Tim Page on
