Eilers, John Laughland, 1980 A highway engineer considering an alternative energy source for an upcoming project probably does not have a background in heating ventilation and air conditioning or electrical engineering but with overall responsibility for the project needs to determine quickly whether or not an alternative energy source is cost effective. If it is cost effective, he would then need to know the design process and terminology to supervise the designer's work. The guide meets these needs and in addition offers a selected bibliography of published information, a listing of persons with experience in this area and a selection of actual case studies of highway agencies that have used alternative energy sources successfully.

A Guide to Small Wind Energy Conversion Systems John Twidell, 2011-06-09. This enterprising book was intended as a practical guide to wind energy generators up to 100 kW rated capacity. Very small machines such as battery chargers are included though the main emphasis is on the 20 kW to 100 kW range. Wind energy conversion systems are being purchased in increasing numbers in the UK. At the time of publication they were used mainly in remote and island installations especially on farms to reduce dependence on conventional fuels such as oil and bottled gas. But the book was not just a practical handbook for those who already had a machine; it supplied sufficient information to allow potential purchasers to decide whether the installation of such a generator would be cost effective in their own particular circumstances. Wind Energy Information Directory, 1980.

Superintendent of Documents, 1968. Handbook of Energy for World Agriculture B.A. Stout, 2012-12-02. Adequate food supplies and a reasonable quality of life require energy both in commercial and non-commercial forms. This handbook is intended as a reference for individuals who want a comprehensive overview of energy for agriculture, many of whom are located in remote areas with limited library resources. The purpose is to put energy for agriculture in perspective by presenting numerous national and regional examples of energy usage. Since the early 1970s, world petroleum prices have fluctuated from US $3 per barrel to more than US $40 per barrel in 1981 and then back to one third of the peak price today. Consequently, the rural sector depends heavily on non-commercial energy sources. Availability of such energy is highly site specific. This handbook deals extensively with non-commercial energy, its sources, the technologies for converting energy to more useful gaseous and liquid forms, and its ultimate end uses. Photographs, tables, line drawings, and graphs are used extensively. Over 600 references are listed along with agency names and addresses for obtaining further information.

Siting Handbook for Small Wind Energy Conversion Systems, 1980. This handbook was written to serve as a siting guide for individuals wishing to install small wind energy conversion systems (WECS) that is, machines having a rated capacity of less than 100 kilowatts. It incorporates half a century of siting experience gained by WECS owners and manufacturers as well as recently developed siting techniques. The user needs no technical background in meteorology or engineering to understand and apply the siting principles discussed; he needs only a knowledge of basic arithmetic and the ability to understand simple graphs and tables. By properly using the siting techniques, an owner can select a site that will yield the most power at the least installation cost the least maintenance cost and the least risk of damage or accidental injury
