

HOW TO IMPROVE YOUR RUNNING FORM

And Become a More Efficient Runner

www.RockCreekRunner.com

Relax your shoulders to allow for fluid, circular arm movements. More like you're chilling at the bar than standing in attention.

Lean slightly forward, but make sure you aren't bending at the waist.

Keep hands in unclenched fists, as if holding the last unbroken potato chip from the bag.

Align your hips directly below the torso. Don't pull a Miley, avoid sticking your butt out.

Reduce stride length and increase stride frequency. Aim for 180 foot strikes per minute. That's the same pace as OutKast's "Hey Ya."

Feet should land underneath the body, minimizing the heel strike.

Swing arms back and forth, not across the body. Think choo-choo train, not the Twist.

When running up a hill, lean into the incline, but don't hunch over at the waist. Also keep the arms moving powerfully.

Lift knees only slightly for a more efficient stride. High knees might be a fun exercise, but not a good way to distance run.
