Luther's Lectures on Genesis

and the Formation of Evangelical Identity John A. Maxfield, 2008-10-01 Martin Luther's lectures on Genesis delivered at the University of Wittenberg during the last decade of his life and later published by his students allow modern readers to view a sixteenth century professor engaging his students with the text of scripture and using that text to form them spiritually. The lectures show how Luther attempted to form in his students a new identity: an Evangelical identity enabling them to make sense of the rapidly changing society and church in which they were being prepared to serve primarily as pastors in the developing territorial churches of the Reformation. This study uses the text of the lectures to outline the contours of the new identity that Luther laid out through his exposition of Genesis. They include how Luther approached and taught his students to perceive the text of holy scripture, how that text unveiled for Luther the nature of Christian life in the world, and how Luther taught his students to view the past, the present, and the future of the church and the world through the book of Genesis. Whether in the published editions of the lectures the historic Luther was actually misunderstood or was transformed in some way into the prophetic Luther of later memory, the text reveals the Luther that his students heard and subsequent generations read.

Johannine Social Identity Formation after the Fall of the Jerusalem Temple Christopher A. Porter, 2021-10-25 In Johannine Social Identity Formation after the Fall of the Jerusalem Temple, Christopher Porter reads the Fourth Gospel through the lens of social identity theory as a means of reconciling the social dislocation and trauma of the destruction of the Jerusalem temple. Analysing the Fourth Gospel in conversation with other temple-related texts of Qumran, Philo, and Josephus, the Gospel's intent to renegotiate cultic life without the temple can be seen. Through this analysis, it is argued that the Fourth Gospel primarily functions as an intra-mural Jewish text attempting to negotiate the formation of a Jesus-follower social identity in direct continuity with earlier Jewish shared social narratives. Finally, this work reviews the Johannine Community as an outcome of the Gospel identity formation.
