

The U.S. global strategy of containment of the Soviet Union by the late 1960s was giving way to new geopolitical positioning. The draw down of the Vietnam War, the U.S. détente with the People's Republic of China, and the announcement by the United States of the Nixon Doctrine set the stage for President Park to intensify further his plans for Korea's development, of which an essential part was the Yusin (Restoration) government system—which by January 1973 had further facilitated the drive toward building the heavy and chemical industries under the title "Heavy and Chemical Industrialization Policy" (HCIP), which eventually became a major weapons development drive. Included in the weapons development were the development of nuclear weapons and the means to deliver them. This, of course, startled the United States, which would oppose any and all measures by the South to possess such weapons.

Author Kim Hyung-A has provided convincing sources to support the assertions for the most part. Like some of the other pertinent literature available—for example, Purun illi sewöl, 1917–1960 (The Era of Frustration and Bad Luck, 1917–60, vol. 1 of Park Chung Hee [Seoul: Kkach'i, 1992]) and a series of a total of 564 episodes in Chosŏn ilbo from October 20, 1997, to December 30, 1999, entitled "Naemudŏm e ch'mül paet'ŏra" (Spit on My Grave!)—this book is fairly balanced with regard to Park, a few exceptions being assertions that Park directed executions, although no convincing evidence is provided. Otherwise, the book satisfactorily provides good sources that detail the broad and ambitious plans successfully implemented to achieve the industrial and economic goals that made the Republic of Korea the developing nation on the verge of becoming the advanced nation that it is today. The author conducted numerous personal interviews with the people who actually contributed to drawing up and carrying to conclusion those plans. Some of those persons have not spoken until recently about the Park era for fear of reprisals.

However, in light of President Park's statist and even dictatorial approach to Korea's development and mass manipulation of the people, the question arises about the state of democracy and individual civil rights during his time as president. This book does not address this important aspect to draw the entire picture.

Kim provides a telling and well-documented account of Korea's development under the leadership of Park. Anyone at all interested in how the Republic of Korea came to the forefront of modern production and national economic and military strength in Northeast Asia at the end of the twentieth century would do well to read this fine book.

Hamel's World: A Dutch-Korean Encounter in the Seventeenth Century. Edited by VIBEKE ROEPER and BOUDEWIJN WALRAVEN, with JEAN-PAUL BUYS. Amsterdam: SUN, 2003. 192 pp. €19.90 (cloth).

The account of Korea written by Hendrik Hamel (1630–92), published in Amsterdam in 1668 and later translated into other European languages, was the earliest collection of reasonably reliable information on Korea to be published in the Western world. Hamel, a Dutch sailor employed by the United East India Company (VOC), was the ship's secretary and one of thirty-six survivors from the wreck of the Sperwer off Cheju Island in August 1653. It would be fifteen years before any of the castaways saw Holland again.
