Evaluating Stakeholder Participation In The Transition To Sustainable Development Methodology Case Studies Policy Implications:

Evaluating Stakeholder Participation in the Transition to Sustainable Development Angela Oels, 2003

Stakeholder participation in economic development is generally considered to be a good thing. However, questions remain: Does stakeholder participation live up to the high expectations about it in the literature? How can success be measured? What are suitable criteria and indicators? How do the involved stakeholders themselves judge the outcomes of their involvement? What can be done to improve the performance of stakeholder participation? Which structural factors impede stakeholder participation? This study addresses questions such as these with respect to methodology, case studies, and policy implications. Angela Oels is assistant professor at the Institute of Political Science, University of Hamburg, Germany. Public Participation and Better Environmental Decisions Frans H. J. M. Coenen, 2008-12-12 Public Participation and Better Environmental Decisions is about a specific promise that participation holds for environmental decision making. Many of the arguments for public participation in international environmental policy documents are functional; that is to say, they see public participation as a means to an end. Sound solutions to environmental problems require participation beyond experts and political elites. Neglecting information from the public leads to legitimacy questions and potential conflicts. There is a discourse in the literature and in policy practice as to whether decision making improves in quality as additional relevant information by the public is considered. The promise that public participation holds has to be weighed against the limitations of public participation in terms of costs and interest conflicts. The question that Public Participation and Better Environmental Decisions seeks to answer for academics, planners, and civil servants in all environmental relevant policy fields is: What restricts and what enables information to hold the promise that public participation lead to better environmental decision making and better outcomes.

Governance for Sustainable Development Jens Newig, Jan-Peter Voß, Jochen Monstadt, 2013-09-13 Sustainable development stirs up debate about the capacities of political steering and governance. The complexity of the task expounds limits of steering in three dimensions: goals, knowledge, and power. Sustainability goals are subject to changing and controversial risk perceptions, values, and interests. Moreover, knowledge of the coupled dynamics of society, technology, and nature is limited. Finally, the power to shape structural change in society and technology is distributed across a multitude of actors and societal subsystems. Steering attempts therefore have to cope with conflict and ambivalence with uncertainty and with a lack of central control, and they have to face the necessity of coordinating different actor groups and social networks. This volume explores steering strategies and governance arrangements for sustainable development with a view to these problem dimensions. The contributions by authors from various disciplines approach these challenges from different conceptual angles, ranging from positivist managerial up to post-modern constructivist perspectives. By combining theoretical reflections with insights from empirical research in European and American contexts, the volume maps out conditions and identifies approaches which both reflect the limits of steering and reveal options for constructively taking up the task of sustainable development in science and practice

Stakeholder Dialogues in Natural Resources

Management Susanne Stoll-Kleemann, Martin Welp, 2007-01-10 Participatory Processes for Natural Resource Management
Ortwin Renn University of Stuttgart Stuttgart Germany Need for analytic deliberative processes Inviting the public to be part of the decision making process in natural resource management has been a major objective in European and American environmental policy arenas The US National Academy of Sciences has encouraged environmental protection agencies to foster citizen participation and public involvement for making environmental policy making and natural resource management more effective and democratic Stern and Fineberg 1996 The report emphasizes the need for a combination of assessment and dialogue which the authors have framed the analytic deliberative approach Unfortunately early public involvement of the public in deliberative processes may compromise however the objective of efficient and effective policy implementation or violate the principle of fairness Cross 1998 Okrent 1998 Another problem is that the public consists of many groups with different value structures and preferences Without a systematic procedure to reach consensus on values and preferences the public's position often appears as unclear Coglianesi 1997 Rossi 1997 Participatory processes are thus needed that combine technical expertise rational decision making and public values and preferences How can and should natural resource managers collect public preferences integrate public input into the management process and assign the appropriate roles to technical experts stakeholders i e
