

DAC CRITERIA FOR EVALUATING DEVELOPMENT ASSISTANCE

When evaluating programmes and projects it is useful to consider the following DAC Criteria, as laid out in the DAC Principles for Evaluation of Development Assistance:

RELEVANCE

The extent to which the aid activity is suited to the priorities and policies of the target group, recipient and donor.

In evaluating the relevance of a programme or a project, it is useful to consider the following questions:

- To what extent are the objectives of the programme still valid?
- Are the activities and outputs of the programme consistent with the overall goal and the attainment of its objectives?
- Are the activities and outputs of the programme consistent with the intended impacts and effects?

EFFECTIVENESS

A measure of the extent to which an aid activity attains its objectives.

In evaluating the effectiveness of a programme or a project, it is useful to consider the following questions:

- To what extent were the objectives achieved / are likely to be achieved?
- What were the major factors influencing the achievement or non-achievement of the objectives?

EFFICIENCY

Efficiency measures the outputs – qualitative and quantitative – in relation to the inputs. It is an economic term which signifies that the aid uses the least costly resources possible in order to achieve the desired results. This generally requires comparing alternative approaches to achieving the same outputs, to see whether the most efficient process has been adopted.

When evaluating the efficiency of a programme or a project, it is useful to consider the following questions:

- Were activities cost-efficient?
- Were objectives achieved on time?
- Was the programme or project implemented in the most efficient way compared to alternatives?

Lembke, 1984 Principles for Evaluation of Development Assistance Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, 1991 Measure What You Treasure Anastasia Maximova, 2015 Russia s system of international development assistance IDA is still in the making Among other things there is a need to establish a system to evaluate its effectiveness Donors usually focus such evaluations on the results of individual projects and programs Today the field of IDA as a whole or its specific policies are increasingly the object of evaluation which raises the question of articulating the expected effect or a goal of IDA from the donor s point of view This article considers the relationship between the underlying purpose of IDA and its evaluation criteria based on our view of the goals of main donors as stated in their policies and criteria outlined in evaluation manuals It compares those findings with related research results Most donors use evaluation criteria related to the positive impact of IDA on the socioeconomic development of recipient countries The declared goals of IDA include fighting poverty supporting sustainable development promoting respect for human rights and ensuring peace and security At the same time the donors political and economic interests never cease to play an important role The global financial crisis has narrowed the gap between words and actions as many donor countries must justify their IDA budgets to their taxpayers Not only have the declared goals of IDA changed but the criteria for evaluation its effectiveness are also being reconsidered Donors are now trying to assess the political and economic effectiveness of IDA for themselves However only a few countries manifest these changes and so it is still early to speak of a common trend

Evaluation Country Development Policies and Programs Robert Picciotto, Ray C. Rist, 1995-10-02 This issue of New Directions for Evaluation deals with the special evaluation problems of programs in the developing world Over the last two decades the framework of economic and social development policy and practice has been transformed This is due in part to evaluation lessons which have helped to shape the new development priorities toward sustainability participation and insitutional development In turn evaluation must deal with the consequences of a more demanding agenda a more fractured development constituency and a vastly more complex set of analytical questions This publication presents the views of development policy makers practitioners and evaluators on the kinds of adjustments needed in the approaches instruments and processes used by development evaluators The chapters were discussed in draft form at a Conference on Evaluation and Development hosted by the world Bank in Washington D C in December 1994 The resulting collection offers a consistent framework for further debate and proposes new emphases for development evaluation This is the 67th issue in the journal series New Directions for Evaluation For more information on the series please see the Journals and Periodicals page
