1. INTRODUCTION

In today's technologically advanced world, where everything appears to be at your disposal, libraries must also be close by. With modernization, everything appears to be feasible in terms of educational facilities. It is common for people to spend at least two to three hours in libraries learning about various topics from the variety of sources available there. Libraries need to be upgraded, and this can be done with the aid of digitalization. For example, can you imagine being able to access thousands of books or sources of knowledge on your mobile phone? This is now possible with Automation. Library automation helps library professional to provide fast delivery of service and other information.

1.1. Library Automation Concept

Ancient Greek defined Automation as "acting of one's own will."

However, the phrase has been in use for a while in libraries. In essence, library automation is a mix of the phrases automation and library. Liber, the Latin word for book, is the origin of the word "library."

Library is a collection of books and other printed material. Automation refers to voluntary action. So we can define library automation as the process of automating task using a computer. It converts the manual processes to digital ones. Alternatively, "it is the employment of machinery for collection, inserting, processing, storage and retrieval of data or information with the help of machineries that called library automation.

1.2. Definition of library Automation Swihart Stanley S and Hefley Beryl F have defined the term library automation as "the processing of certain routine clerical function in the library with the assistance of computer or other mechanized or semi equipment". It may also defined as a process of mechanization of all housekeeping operation of a library which is repetitive in nature. The housekeeping operation includes acquisition, cataloguing, circulation, and other administration work.

Note:- In case of library housekeeping operation, the computer is used for acquisition of books and other reading materials, their classification, cataloguing and serial control.

According to encyclopaedic dictionary of library science automation is the technology concerned with
