

JCL – Job Control Language

- Job Control Language (JCL) is a sequential collection of 80 character records beginning with // which the operating system can read and interpret to request resources and services from the operating system.
- JCL is used to
 - Assign the task a name and authority level
 - Assign resources (programs, files, memory) and services needed from the operating system to process a task.
- JCL can be viewed as a list of statements to be ‘submitted’ for background (batch) processing or ‘started’ for foreground (started task) processing.
