George Washington, 2004 An introduction to the life of George Washington a brave man and good military leader who became the nation's first president US Presidents and the Militarization of Space, 1946-1967 Sean N. Kalic, 2012-04-10 In the clash of ideologies represented by the Cold War even the heavens were not immune to militarization Satellites and space programs became critical elements among the national security objectives of both the United States and the Soviet Union According to US Presidents and the Militarization of Space 1946-1967 three American presidents in succession shared a fundamental objective of preserving space as a weapons-free frontier for the benefit of all humanity Between 1953 and 1967 Presidents Eisenhower Kennedy and Johnson all saw nonaggressive military satellite development as well as the civilian space program as means to favorably shape the international community's opinion of the scientific technological and military capabilities of the United States Sean N. Kalic's reinterpretation of the development of US space policy based on documents declassified in the past decade demonstrates that a single vision for the appropriate uses of space characterized American strategies across parties and administrations during this period Significantly Kalic's findings contradict the popular opinion that the United States sought to weaponize space and calls into question the traditional interpretation of the space race as a simple action-reaction paradigm Indeed beyond serving as a symbol and ambassador of US technological capability its satellite program provided the United States with advanced nonaggressive military intelligence gathering platforms that proved critical in assessing the strategic nuclear balance between the United States and the Soviet Union It also aided the three administrations in countering the Soviet Union's increasing international prestige after its series of space firsts beginning with the launch of Sputnik in 1957
