Getting Rid Of Rhoda:

Rhoda's education Lucy Ellen Guernsey, 2025-03-12 RHODA BOWERS stood at the east window of her own room busily engaged in binding off the neck of a little baby's shirt one of a set which had occupied all the spare minutes which she could contrive to spend in her own room for the past few weeks They were not many for she had to assist her mother in the housework and yet she had contrived to knit four little shirts of the softest wool and prettiest design for the new little brother who had lately come to the household Rhoda had taken great pains with them and she meant if her mother could spare her to go down this very afternoon to Aunt Hannah's and learn of her how to crochet the scalloped edge round the tops How pretty they are she said as she bound off the last stitch and held the little garment up before her I am so glad Aunt Hannah knew how to make them I only hope mother will like them Heigho I wonder if my own mother used to make any such pretty things for me when I was a baby How I do wish I could remember the least thing about her But I don't It seems to me that the very first thing I recollect is Mrs Munson feeding me with little bits of cold turkey in the nursery at The Home I wonder if the old place looks at all as it used to Some time I think I will ask mother to let me go back there for a little visit I should like to see them all again But I dare say it is changed since my time I think everything and everybody changes in this world And Rhoda's face clouded a little as she stood looking out of the window but it cleared up again and she gave herself a kind of shake as if to get rid of some incumbrance
