

Thanksgiving dinner served at Good Housekeeping Institute! In testing out recipes and in planning menus to be published in Good Housekeeping or in our bulletins or our cook book, much cooking and meal making go on in our busy kitchen. Every recipe is carefully tried out, and when the result is deliciously satisfactory to our testing staff, it is written out in a clear and concise form and added to our list of recipes Tested, Tasted, and Approved. Many of the meals we plan are prepared and served to guests and to our own staff. Only standard measuring cups and spoons tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute are used; all measurements are level; the cooking temperature and time are carefully recorded. You can trust every recipe.
