Covered Wagon Women Marsha E. Montoya, David Duniway, Kenneth L. Holmes, 1999-04-01 The overland trails in the 1860s witnessed the creation of stage stations to facilitate overland travel These stations placed every twenty or thirty miles ensured that travelers would be able to obtain grain for their livestock and food for themselves They also sped up the process of mail delivery to remote Western outposts Tragically the easing of overland travel coincided with renewed conflicts with the Cheyenne and other Plains Indians The massacre of Black Kettle s people at Sand Creek instigated two years of bloody reprisals and counterreprisals Amid this turmoil and change these daring women continued to build on the example set by earlier women pioneers As Harriet Loughary wrote upon her arrival in California after two thousands of miles in an ox team making an average of eighteen miles a day enduring privations and dangers When we think of the earliest pioneers we feel an untold gratitude towards them

Best of Covered Wagon Women Kenneth L. Holmes, 2014-10-20 The diaries and letters of women who braved the overland trails during the great nineteenth century westward migration are treasured documents in the study of the American West These eight firsthand accounts are among the best ever written They were selected for the power with which they portray the hardship adventure and boundless love for friends and family that characterized the overland experience Some were written with the skilled pens of educated women Others bear the marks of crude cabin learning with archaic and imaginative spelling and a simplicity of expression All convey the profound effect the westward trek had on these women For too long these diaries and letters were secreted away in attics and basements or collected dust on the shelves of manuscript collections across the country Their publication gives us a fresh perspective on the pioneer experience
