Calumpung, Richard Donald

Braley, 1992 Why Don't Jellyfish Have Brains? Caitie McAneney, 2018-07-15 Jellyfish are some of the creepiest creatures out there They're about 95 percent water and basically evaporate when they wash up on a beach and they don't have brains This absorbing book details how these animals survive without this important organ and other weird facts about the invertebrate world Even more fascinating than the freaky facts are the eye catching images that illustrate each crucial concept Sidebars and graphic organizers present more valuable information

Under the Sea Crosswords Sterling Publishing Company,2008-10 What lives under the sea This title features puzzles that presents a different marine animal complete with a fascinating fact filled paragraph It includes watery creatures such as the Atlantic Loggerhead Sea Turtle which can weigh up to 200 pounds and the Blue Whale Earth s largest animal

Mollusks Ruth Miller,2004-12-20 The Animal Kingdom series explores the familiar and bizarre creatures that make up the animal world Each book looks at a particular group of animals and explains how they are classified into smaller groups such as phyla classes orders and species The books also examine what makes these groups different from each other Book jacket

An Alien place on Earth: The Red Sea as a model for Future Oceans Rúben Costa,Christian Voolstra,2023-05-11 Our oceans are changing Elevated greenhouse gases caused the increase of Earth s average temperature or global warming and contributed to what we now know as climate change This in turn has a big influence on the oceans and the organisms that live in them Given that oceans are changing so rapidly how are marine organisms affected by this Can they adapt How can we study those adaptations Where should we start In between Africa and Asia in the Middle East region lies a vast mass of seawater connected to the Indian ocean by its southern end This water body is called the Red Sea some say because of the presence of a reddish brown cyanobacteria in its waters others say because red was the color representing south of the Mediterranean civilization in ancient times Its location makes it a unique environment with high temperatures and salinities the amount of salt dissolved in water creating a complex environmental gradient from north to south in its more than two thousand kilometers of length Despite these harsh almost alien conditions the Red Sea is home to large green mangroves and seagrass meadows more than a thousand species of fish many of them unique to the Red Sea hundreds of species of corals and countless invertebrates At the microscopic level we make new discoveries every day so that our knowledge on the diversity of bacteria microalgae and viruses is constantly increasing But if it is so difficult to sustain life in the Red Sea how do all these organisms still prosper in it This is one of many questions scientists are trying to answer by studying how abiotic factors such as temperature salinity and nutrients of the Red Sea can affect its organisms or biota Moreover due to its extreme conditions the Red Sea can also act as a unique laboratory to study and learn about the future impacts of climate change on ecosystems it represents a time machine that allows us to look into the future of tropical oceans and lets us understand how organisms thrive in environmental extremes The aim of this collection is to explore the current knowledge we have on the Red Sea biodiversity and its adaptability to environmental change From coral reefs and the mutual beneficial relationships symbiosis between organisms to seagrasses and brine pools we aspire to learn how life can find a way to flourish even when the odds seem to be against it More importantly by understanding the present conditions of the Red Sea we might be able to predict how organisms from other regions will adapt to fast changing climate
