The Individual's Guide to Grants Judith B. Margolin,2012-12-06 This book is a work of conscience It is the product of a long standing feeling of obligation on my part to write something useful for a special group of people to which you probably belong individuals who seek grants In my years as Director of the New York library of The Foundation Center each and every day I encountered numbers of individuals looking for grant money Although I tried to be as supportive as possible in the face of the particular problems shared by this group of library users my own reaction was one of relative helplessness Simply stated most of the fund raising guides printed directories and computer files purportedly created to serve the fund raising public are of little or no use to individuals who seek funding on their own These resources are directed The Foundation Center is the independent nonprofit organization established by foundations to provide information for the grant seeking public vii viii I PREFACE toward the nonprofit tax exempt agency which is the most common recipient of foundation corporate and government largess They are not designed to respond to the special requirements of the individual grant seeker In the applicant eligibility index the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance defines individuals as homeowners students farmers artists scientists consumers small business persons minors refugees aliens veterans senior citizens low income persons health and educational professionals builders contractors developers handicapped persons the physically afflicted In short practically everyone qualifies

Reference Support for Distance Learners takes a comprehensive look at efforts by librarians and information specialists to provide distance learners with effective services that match those already available on campus. With the development of the World Wide Web and the evolution of Web based services, reference librarians are adding a human element to the virtual library, blurring the difference between distance learners and traditional users. This unique book examines how they deal with a wide range of related topics including standards and guidelines, copyright issues, streaming media and chat, and digital references, and presents a historical overview of how reference and instructional services have been delivered to distance users. Before and after the creation of the Internet Reference Support for Distance Learners, it reveals that librarians do not make a sharp distinction between reference and instruction within the context of distance learning and that there is no clear boundary between true distance learners and more traditional students who might use services designed for nontraditional users. Online capabilities have allowed reference librarians to approximate services advocated by published guidelines and standards, including the ACRL Distance Learning Section's Guidelines for Distance Learning Library Services, to provide a framework for librarians to plan services for off campus students. Internet Reference Support for Distance Learners provides practical information on how librarians can keep IT simple when designing methods to access reference support, why library Web sites are vital sources of communication between the distance learning student and the reference based instructional component, how to set up a university chat service including software selection, staff training and assessment, how to provide students services beyond traditional provision of resources including advising, enrollment and payment of fees, how to create an online assistance site that incorporates online versions of traditional print handouts, FAQs, subject guides, course specific guides, learning modules and instructional videos in one central location, how to work with faculty to create online support for students in Blackboard courses, the pros and cons of using open source software, how to create an online library assistance site, how to create an online information literacy course to teach independent research skills to remote students, how to avoid copyright infringement and how to educate library personnel about copyright law, how to use Camtasia Studio, a screen capture program to create audio and video for online presentations. Internet Reference Support for Distance Learners is an invaluable resource for librarians working in academic, school, special and public settings and for library science faculty and students.
