An Archaeology of Land Ownership Maria Relaki, Despina Catapoti, 2013-10-23 Within archaeological studies land tenure has been mainly studied from the viewpoint of ownership A host of studies has argued about land ownership on the basis of the simple co existence of artefacts on the landscape other studies have tended to extrapolate land ownership from more indirect means Particularly noteworthy is the tendency to portray land ownership as the driving force behind the emergence of social complexity a primordial ingredient in the processes that led to the political and economic expansion of prehistoric societies The association between people and land in all of these interpretive schemata is however less easy to detect analytically Although various rubrics have been employed to identify such a connection most notable among them the concepts of cultures regions or even households they take the links between land and people as a given and not as something that needs to be conceptually defined and empirically substantiated An Archaeology of Land Ownership demonstrates that the relationship between people and land in the past is first and foremost an analytical issue and one that calls for clarification not only at the level of definition but also methodological applicability Bringing together an international roster of specialists the essays in this volume call attention to the processes by which links to land are established the various forms that such links take and how they can change through time as well as their importance in helping to forge or dilute an understanding of community at various circumstances

Crossing European Boundaries Jaro Stacul, Christina Moutsou, Helen Kopnina, 2006 At the turn of the millennium the state of Europe is fluid and contested yet how this affects the everyday lives of European peoples and the ways they experience the social world they live in remains largely unexplored Drawing upon ethnographic information from diverse European settings this volume points to the contradictions that the project of a Europe without boundaries involves In illustrating how the removal of political boundaries can create other boundaries the articles in this volume provide alternatives to recent theorising on complexity which takes little account of human agency

The British in Rural France Michaela Benson, 2013-07-19 The British in rural France available at last in paperback is a study of how lifestyle choices intersect with migration and how this relationship frames and shapes post migration lives It presents a conceptual framework for understanding post migration lives that incorporates culturally specific imaginings lived experiences individual life histories and personal circumstances Through an ethnographic lens incorporating in depth interviews participant observation life and migration histories this monograph reveals the complex process by which migrants negotiate and make meaningful their lives following migration By promoting their own ideologies and lifestyle choices relative to those of others British migrants in rural France reinforce their position as members of the British middle class but also take authorship of their lives in a way not possible before migration This is evident in the pursuit of a better way of life that initially motivated migration and continues to characterise post migration lives As the book argues this ongoing quest is both reflective of wider ideologies about living particularly the desire for authentic living and subtle processes of social distinction In these respects The British in rural France provides a unique empirical example of the relationship between the pursuit of authenticity and middle class identification practices The book will be of interest to lifestyle migration and migration specialists sociologists social anthropologists human geographers scholars of tourism as well as being accessible to individuals with a broader interest in this social phenomenon

Environmental Protection, Law and Policy Jane Holder, Maria Lee, 2007-07-19 This 2007 book examines environmental law from a range of perspectives emphasising the policy world from which environmental law is drawn and nourished Those working within the discipline of environmental law need to engage with concepts and methods employed by disciplines other than law The authors analyse the ways in which legal activities are supported and legitimated by work in traditional scientific or technical domains as well as by certain more obscure but also influential cultural or philosophical assumptions A range of regulatory techniques is explored in this book through a close examination of both pollution control and land use The highly complex nature of current environmental problems demanding sophisticated and responsive legal controls is illustrated by several in depth case studies including legal and policy analysis of the highly contested issues of genetically modified organisms and renewable energy projects

The Juridification of Business Ethics Bart Jansen, 2023-08-25 This book provides a theory of the juridification of business ethics Ethical codes pop up everywhere in the business world and increasingly resemble the code of law A focus on compliance rather than reflection becomes the norm Legal perspectives replace ethical perspectives turning ethicists into lawyers without a law degree This juridification of business ethics conceals a diminishing trust in ethics as legal reasoning substitutes philosophical thinking By appealing to the critical study of law Bart Jansen advocates for a renewed focus on the ethical side of business This book shows the importance of a good balance between law and ethics in business and is of great interest to both academics and professionals

The People of the River Oscar de la Torre, 2018-08-17 In this history of the black peasants of Amazonia Oscar de la Torre focuses on the experience of African descended people navigating the transition from slavery to freedom He draws on social and environmental history to connect them intimately to the natural landscape and to Indigenous peoples Relying on this world as a repository for traditions discourses and strategies that they retrieved especially in moments of conflict Afro Brazilians fought for autonomous communities and developed a vibrant ethnic identity that supported their struggles over labor land and citizenship Prior to abolition enslaved and escaped blacks found in the tropical forest a source for tools weapons and trade but it was also a cultural storehouse within which they shaped their stories and records of confrontations with slaveowners and state authorities After abolition the black peasants knowledge of local environments continued to be key to their aspirations allowing them to maintain relationships with powerful patrons and to participate in the protest cycle that led Get lio Vargas to the presidency of Brazil in 1930 In commonly referring to themselves by such names as sons of the river black Amazonians melded their agro ecological traditions with their emergent identity as political stakeholders

From Environmentalism to Transenvironmentalism

Aimilia Voulvouli,2009 How can the examination of action groups such as the one discussed in this book help to initiate a discussion of environmental conflicts as societal conflicts In this work which is an ethnographic study of a protest born in Istanbul during the late 1990s the author suggests that the peculiarities of a protest group should be viewed as social political and cultural rather than issue specific The book offers a close ethnographic examination of the protest studying it as a product of the particular character of Turkish public life It illustrates the particular character of the protest itself as a product of the identities evolving the activities taking place and the community that these have created amidst the struggle It is a contribution to the anthropology of collective action and brings together recent studies of the anthropology of social movements environmentalism and urban settings with wider literature on social movements civil society and urban studies and anthropological and sociological studies on Turkey

Sentient Lands Piergiorgio Di Giminiani,2018-11-20

In 1990 when Augusto Pinochet s 17 year military dictatorship ended democratic rule returned to Chile Since then Indigenous organizations have mobilized to demand restitution of their ancestral territories seized over the past 150 years Sentient Lands is a historically grounded ethnography of the Mapuche people s engagement with state run reconciliation and land restitution efforts Piergiorgio Di Giminiani analyzes environmental relations property state power market forces and indigeneity to illustrate how land connections are articulated in both landscape experiences and land claims Rather than viewing land claims as simply bureaucratic procedures imposed on local understandings and experiences of land connections Di Giminiani reveals these processes to be disputed practices of world making Ancestral land formation is set in motion by the entangled principles of Indigenous and legal land ontologies two very different and sometimes conflicting processes Indigenous land ontologies are based on a relation between two subjects land and people both endowed with sentient abilities By contrast legal land ontologies are founded on the principles of property theory wherein land is an object of possession that can be standardized within a regime of value Governments also use land claims to domesticate Indigenous geographies into spatial constructs consistent with political and market configurations Exploring the unexpected effects on political activism and state reparation policies caused by this entanglement of Indigenous and legal land ontologies Di Giminiani offers a new analytical angle on Indigenous land politics

Property and Equality Thomas Widlok,Wolde Gossa

Tadesse,2006-01-01 The ethnography of egalitarian social systems was first met with sheer disbelief Today it is still hotly debated in a number of fields and has gained sophistication as well as momentum This collection of essays on property and equality acknowledges this diversification by presenting research results in two complementary volumes They bring together a wide range of authoritative researchers most of whom have worked with hunter gatherer groups These two volumes cover existing ethnographic and theoretical ground while maintaining a clear focus on the relation between property and equality The book consists of the most recent work of prominent members of the original group of researchers in hunter gatherer studies among them James Woodburn and Richard Lee and very recent ethnography on hunter gatherers and other egalitarian systems
