Pediatric Thoracic Surgery D.H. Parikh, David Crabbe, Alex Auldist, Steven Rothenberg, 2009-03-26 In most parts of the world the treatment of adults with surgically correctable abnormalities of the thorax and its contents is provided by specially trained thoracic surgeons On the other hand in children pediatric general surgeons usually take on this role because of their training in the surgical care of sick infants and children and their experience with the management of congenital malformations In an ideal world the treatment of surgical disorders of the thorax in children would be provided by a super specialist but this is neither practical nor possible This text provides information that will help bridge the gap for a group of conditions often only encountered rarely by otherwise experienced surgeons This book is not designed to be a textbook of operative surgery Instead the broad scope is to provide important up to date information and reference material relating to most of the thoracic surgical conditions seen in childhood The editors and contributors have ably met their goal to give the reader the proper medical and surgical principles needed to treat these childhood conditions One can't help to note the impressive array of authors from around the world When I first started out in pediatric surgery only a few pediatric surgeons in a few centers would dare tackle some of the abnormalities noted in these chapters Others who dared because they had no other choice often failed Now it is clear that globalization has truly come to our discipline

Difficult Decisions in Thoracic Surgery Mark K. Ferguson, 2007-03-12 Why do thoracic surgeons need training in decision making Many of us who have weathered harrowing residencies in surgery feel that after such experiences decision making is a natural extension of our selves While this is no doubt true correct decision making is something that many of us have yet to master The impetus to develop a text on evidence based decision making in thoracic surgery was stimulated by a conference for cardiothoracic surgical trainees developed in 2004 and sponsored by the American College of Chest Physicians During that conference it became clear that we as thoracic surgeons are operating from a very limited fund of true evidence based information What was also clear was the fact that many of the decisions we make in our everyday practices are not only uninformed by evidence based medicine but often are contradictory to existing guidelines or evidence based recommendations The objectives of this book are to explain the process of decision making both on the part of the physician and on the part of the patient and to discuss specific clinical problems in thoracic surgery and provide recommendations regarding their management using evidence based methodology Producing a text that will purportedly guide experienced practicing surgeons in the decision making process that they are accustomed to observe on a daily basis is a daunting task
