The Metropolitan Frontier Carl Abbott, 1995-09-01 Honolulu to Houston and from Fargo to Fairbanks to show how Western cities organize the region's vast spaces and connect them to the even larger sphere of the world economy His survey moves from economic change to social and political response examining the initial boom of the 1940s the process of change in the following decades and the ultimate impact of Western cities on their environments on the Western regional character and on national identity Today a

How Cities Won the West Carl Abbott, 2011-03-03 Cities rather than individual pioneers have been the driving force in the settlement and economic development of the western half of North America Throughout the seventeenth eighteenth and nineteenth centuries western urban centers served as starting points for conquest and settlement As these frontier cities matured into metropolitan centers they grew from imitators of eastern culture and outposts of eastern capital into independent sources of economic cultural and intellectual change From the Gulf of Alaska to the Mississippi River and from the binational metropolis of San Diego Tijuana to the Prairie Province capitals of Canada Carl Abbott explores the complex urban history of western Canada and the United States The evolution of western cities from stations for exploration and military occupation to contemporary entry points for migration and components of a global economy reminds us that it is cities that won the West And today as cultural change increasingly moves from west to east Abbott argues that the urban West represents a new center from which emerging patterns of behavior and changing customs will help to shape North America in the twenty first century

Sullivan-esque Ronald E. Schmitt, 2024-04-22 Sullivan-esque offers a visual and historical tour of a unique but often overlooked facet of modern American architecture derived from Louis Sullivan Highly regarded in architecture for inspiring the Chicago School and the Prairie School Sullivan was an unwilling instigator of the method of facade composition later influenced by Frank Lloyd Wright William Gray Purcell and George G. Elmslie that came to be known as Sullivan-esque Decorative enhancements with botanical and animal themes Sullivan's distinctive ornamentation mitigated the hard geometries of the large buildings he designed coinciding with his form follows function aesthetic Sullivan's designs offered solutions to problems presented by new types and scales of buildings Widely popular they were also widely copied and the style proliferated due to a number of Chicago based interests including the Radford Architectural Company and several decorative plaster and terra cotta companies Stock replicas of Sullivan's designs manufactured by the Midland Terra Cotta Company and others gave distinction and focus to utilitarian buildings in Chicago's commercial strips and other confined areas such as the downtown districts of smaller towns Mass produced Sullivan-esque terra cotta endured as a result of its combined economic and aesthetic appeal blending the sophistication of high architectural art with the pragmatic functionality of building design

Masterfully framed by the author's photographs of Sullivan-esque buildings in Chicago and throughout the Midwest Ronald E. Schmitt's in-depth exploration of the Sullivan-esque tells the story of its evolution from Sullivan's intellectual and aesthetic foundations to its place as a form of commercial vernacular. The book also includes an inventory of Sullivan-esque buildings. Honorable Mention recipient of the 2002 PSP Awards for Excellence in Professional Scholarly Publishing

Reinforced Concrete and the Modernization of American Building, 1900-1930 Amy E. Slaton, 2003-04-01 Examining the proliferation of reinforced concrete construction in the United States after 1900, historian Amy E. Slaton considers how scientific approaches and occupations displaced traditionally skilled labor. The technology of concrete buildings, little studied by historians of engineering, architecture, or industry, offers a remarkable case study in the modernization of American production. The use of concrete brought to construction the new procedures and priorities of mass production. These included a comprehensive application of science to commercial enterprise and vast redistributions of skills, opportunities, credit, and risk in the workplace. Reinforced concrete also changed the American landscape as building buyers embraced the architectural uniformity and simplicity to which the technology was best suited. Based on a wealth of data that includes university curricula, laboratory and company records, organizational proceedings, blueprints, and promotional materials, as well as a rich body of physical evidence such as tools, instruments, building materials, and surviving reinforced concrete buildings, this book tests the thesis that modern mass production in the United States came about not simply in answer to manufacturers' search for profits but as a result of a complex of occupational and cultural agendas.

The Making of the American Landscape Michael P. Conzen, 2014-06-03 The only compact yet comprehensive survey of environmental and cultural forces that have shaped the visual character and geographical diversity of the settled American landscape, the book examines the large-scale historical influences that have molded the varied human adaptation of the continent's physical topography to its needs over more than 500 years. It presents a synoptic view of myriad historical processes working together or in conflict and illustrates them through their survival in or disappearance from the everyday landscapes of today.

Encyclopedia of the Great Plains David J. Wishart, 2004-01-01 Wishart and the staff of the Center for Great Plains Studies have compiled a wide-ranging, pun-intended encyclopedia of this important region. Their objective was to give definition to a region that has traditionally been poorly defined, and they have.

Architecture and Mathematics from Antiquity to the Future Kim Williams, Michael J.
